Police officers disciplined

Force used on street kids?

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Several Victoria policemen have been disciplined over allegations they used excessive force against the so-called street kids, the Times has learned.

Police Chief Jack Gregory, who retires at the end of the year, has acknowledged that certain policemen were questioned about the charges.

But he said they were without foundation and said reports current among street workers and others that the officers had been told to "clean up their act," in the words of one worker, are untrue.

However, the Times heard from several independent sources that the police officers in question were in fact warned about their tactics in dealing with the street kids.

The sources were quick to praise the police department for acting quickly on the problem, which they were also careful to point out was caused by only a few members of the force.

Community worker Shirley Wakeham said she later saw two of the officers on foot patrol beat after their squad car had been taken away.

The action took place shortly after a Sept. 5 meeting at the police station involving Deputy Chief Jim Smith, Const. John Smith of the community services section and three people who work with the street kids — Wakeham, Rev. Philip Ross who runs the Upper Room retreat on Johnson Street and Gib Forester of the Mustard Seed storefront rescue operation on Pandora.

One participant said three policemen were mentioned by name at the meeting, but he knew "of only one personally." He also said he heard that within 15 minutes of the meeting action was taken by senior police officers to deal with the complaints.

Forester praised the Victoria police. "I found the police were bending over backwards to help."

Wakeham also said "there are some great cops" and most officers were uncomfortable with the knowledge that a few have used excessive force against the street kids.

She said when the deputy chief told the Sept. 5 meeting that police were generally co-operative, "I exploded for 45 minutes" with numerous specific allegations against certain officers.

Phoney letters spread

The police investigation into phoney letters to newspapers spread province-wide Monday with the discovery of more fake letters.

Associate deputy attorney-general Neil McDiarmid called in the RCMP to co-ordinate investigations already under way by Victoria and Vancouver city police and the Nanaimo RCMP.

The action came on the heels of allegations of more phoney newspaper letters, this time in the Nelson-Creston riding of NDP MLA Lorne Nicolson.

Nicolson said Monday he believes as many as 20 letters bearing fake names were printed in the Nelson Daily News during last year's campaign for the May 10 election.

Nicolson said the letters all attacked him or his party.

He said a number of letters first appeared in the paper in March and April, 1976.

When four of the names were checked, it was discovered the writers did not exist.

The fresh discovery and the broader police investigation are the latest development in the series of events tied in with the Social Credit lettergate affair.

Socred researchers Jack Kelly and Ellen Mackay had advocated the party play dirty to win the last provincial election.

One way was was to send phoney letters to the editor, they suggested.

Nothing was said until their suggestions became public last month.

It was then discovered their comments had been taped and some 170 copies of the tape had been distributed throughout the province.

B.C. to appeal family act verdict

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government intends to appeal a British Columbia Supreme Court ruling that found three vital sections of the province's Family Relations Act to be unconstitutional.

Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon overturned clauses allowing provincial courts to determine child custody, possession of family residences after divorce and the power to keep one parent away from children under a custody order.

Of the act's major provisions, only the right of provincial courts to order maintenance payment was upheld.

A spokesman for the attorney-general's department in Victoria said the decision will be appealed. He said the government has been trying to expand provincial court jurisdiction as a matter of policy.

It was the second major blow to provincial legislation in two weeks. The court earlier overturned the Heroin Treatment Act which called for compulsory treatment of drug addicts.

The test case is expected to have far-reaching ramifications for many family litigants whose provincial court cases were awaiting the outcome of the Supreme Court ruling.

The Supreme Court case began with an application by lawyer D.S. Moir for an order prohibiting Provincial Court Judge H.D. Boyle from proceeding with a Family Relations Act case in which a wife had applied for sole occupancy of the matrimonial home, custody of an infant son, an order that the husband be prohibited from entering the dwelling, and an

Tripled oil price urged for self-sufficiency

Times News Services

CALGARY — Provincial energy ministers were told Monday that Canadians should be prepared to pay a $4 annual increase in the price of domestic crude oil between now and 1983 if Canada is to be self-sufficient in energy by the end of the next decade.

The Canadian Petroleum Association, in announcing the need for the increase, also called for domestic prices to triple by 1986.

The CPA conducts research and lobbies for Canada's largest oil companies, including huge multinationals such as Shell, Texaco and Exxon subsidiary Imperial Oil.

CPA president Fraser Allen told the ministers the association would favor the $4-per-barrel price hike being widely reported. He added that the CPA wants prices to rise even more steeply in future.

Allen suggested a domestic oil price of $45 by 1986 — more than triple the present level of $13.75 per barrel.

The CPA's brief to the energy ministers called for annual $4 increases until 1983, followed by $5 per barrel a year until 1986 to catch Canada up to world prices, now about $25 and rising.

An increase of a dollar a barrel at the wellhead results in an increase of about 3.5 cents per gallon at the pump for gasoline and heating oil.

After 1986, Canada should follow anticipated annual world price increases of 8 to 9 per cent, the brief said.

Allen said the large increases are necessary to finance massive energy projects needed to increase the domestic oil supply.

"The money's got to come from somewhere and it's got to come in very large amounts."

Allen outlined a five-point plan for achieving energy self-sufficiency by 1990, a goal set by the federal government.

The plan includes:

— intensive exploration and development in conventional oil- and natural gas-producing regions;

— dramatic expansion of production in oil sands and heavy oil;

— intensified exploration in the Beaufort Sea and off the east coast and production of large amounts of oil from these areas;

— new methods of enhanced recovery to increase production from conventional oilfields;

— conservation of crude oil.

Allen said there is no single answer.

"All five avenues leading to increased crude production must be pursued with the same tough-minded sense of purpose."

Allen said stepped-up exports of surplus natural gas are the key to the plan's success. The added revenues would be used to finance the program. Gas prices would continue to be set at 85 per cent of the price for the energy equivalent in oil.

Market rally fizzles out

TORONTO (CP) — An attempted rally by both the New York and Toronto stock markets fizzled today after some banks and trust companies in the United States raised their interest rates.

The New York market was mixed in an erratic session as the bank prime lending rate climbed to a record 15 per cent.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than three points in early trading, showed a 0.26 gain at 809.39 by 2 p.m.

But losers held a 4-to-3 lead over gainers in the mid-afternoon tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said some early buying was encouraged by the market's showing Monday, when the Dow Jones industrial average rebounded after slipping briefly below the 800 level for the first time since last December.

At Toronto, the TSE 300 index, the main indicator of price levels, was up 1.51 to 1,538.76 at noon although it had gained 11.28 to 1,548.53 at 11 a.m.

Analysts said the market opened strongly as bargain-hunters reacted to sharp losses Monday.

But the markets lost ground following announcements that several U.S. banks and trust companies had raised their prime lending rates.

The Royal Bank of Canada also announced an increase today in the U.S. base lending rate to 15¼ per cent from 14¾ per cent, effective immediately. The rate is the one at which the bank lends U.S. funds in Canada.

Monday, British Columbia Resources Investment Corp. shares dropped 65 cents on the Vancouver Stock Exchange to $6.25, about the same price at which trading started back in August.

There were 447,460 shares traded Monday. Analysts say the cause for the heavy trading and declining price is high interest rates.

Piglet protest for princess

SAN FRANCISCO (Reuter) — Twenty-five riot policemen, wearing crash helmets and carrying long batons, barred the way to demonstrators chanting "British out of Ireland" when Princess Margaret attended a $500-a-ticket dinner Monday night.

The 100 demonstrators, including a few children, had promised to release 1,000 pigs during the demonstration.

Instead, they produced just one frightened piglet, named Jigs, who was held on a leash and was decorated with a green ribbon.

This was the fourth demonstration in three days against Princess Margaret following a remark attributed to her in Chicago 10 days ago in which she was said to have described the Irish as pigs.

One time it was suggested she used the word jigs instead of pigs.

Princess Margaret's private secretary, Lord Napier, said the princess has denied making any such remarks.

Shah in U.S. hospital for cancer treatment

NEW YORK (UPI) — The exiled shah of Iran flew to New York Monday and was admitted to a local hospital for treatment of cancer, U.S. officials said.

In Washington, State Department officials said European and American doctors had examined the shah and reported the former ruler is suffering from a "malignant tumor," a form of cancer, and a blocked bile duct.

The two problems, the officials said, are unrelated to each other, but contributed to a significant deterioration of his condition in the last several days.

The Shah was installed in a three-room suite and surrounded by tight security, said the hospital's vice president for public affairs, Eamon Brennan.

William Greene, hospital administrator, said the shah was admitted about 11 p.m. Monday, an hour after he slipped into New York at LaGuardia Airport aboard a Gulfstream twin-engine jet.

The shah has been living in Cuernavaca, Mexico, since he was forced to leave Iran in February following a revolution.

U.S. state department spokesman David Passage said in Washington early today the shah was granted permission to visit the United States strictly for medical reasons.

Conoco and Gulf make huge profits

NEW YORK (AP) — Conoco Inc. and Gulf Oil Corp. today joined other big oil companies announcing huge third-quarter profits, underlinng criticism by President Carter and others about oil industry earnings at a time consumers are faced with massive increases in energy costs.

Conoco, the ninth-largest U.S. oil company, said its income rose 133 per cent in the quarter. Gulf, fifth-ranked U.S. oil company, reported a 97-per-cent increase. Like other oil companies announcing big third-quarter gains, both said most of the increased profits came from overseas operations.

President Carter made another pitch Monday for his tax on oil-company windfall profits, saying that while oil concerns already generate large sums of money, "they want more."

"But it's not fair to the American people for them to have more."

Carter was particularly piqued at Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company, which said Monday its profits rose 118 per cent in the July-September quarter. The increase was the largest in Exxon's history and among the most ever earned in a quarter by a U.S. company.

Also announcing a big rise in third-quarter earnings Monday was seventh-ranked Atlantic Richfield Co., which said its profits rose 45 per cent. Standard Oil Co. of Indiana announced a 49-per-cent profit gain last Friday.

Hunter hits dog, kills self

MOSES LAKE, Wash. (AP) — A hunter shot himself while using the butt of his 12-gauge shotgun to discipline his dog, say Grant County authorities.

County Coroner Dick Zornes said Donie Wheeler, 28, of Quincy, Wash., died in a Moses Lake hospital shortly after the accident Sunday.

Wheeler was hunting with a 13-year-old companion when the accident occurred, Zornes said.

Wheeler apparently became angry with the dog and was swinging the butt of the gun at the animal when the weapon discharged, Zornes said.

Average family's buying power dropped 3% in '78

OTTAWA (CP) — Average family income rose last year by six per cent, but the actual buying power of an average family dropped by three per cent, Statistics Canada said Monday.

Last year the average family had become-tax income of $21,346 compared with $20,101 the previous year.

Since the cost of living rose by nine per cent during the same period, the dollar increase was not enough to keep up with the rate of inflation.

Average income of an unattached individual last year was $8,861, an increase of seven per cent from the previous year. For men the figure was $13,522 and for women $6,312.

Family incomes by region were: Atlantic provinces $17,064, Quebec $20,261, Ontario $22,628, Prairie provinces $21,242 and British Columbia $23,327.

Although the average family lost buying power last year, the proportion of the population officially classified as poor grew only slightly.

The agency classified 666,000 families in its official low-income group. That was an increase of one per cent from the 659,000 families below the poverty line in 1977.

The characteristics of a low-income family vary, depending on its number of members, whether it is a rural or urban household and — if urban — the size of the city.

For a family of four living in a city of at least 500,000, for example, the cut-off point was $10,654 a year. To be considered poor in a small town, however, the same family had to have an annual income of less than $8,910 and a four-member family was not classified as poor in a rural area until its income dropped below $7,747.

The agency described low-income families as follows:

— In 42 out of 100 cases, they had two members. In 23 cases, three members and in the remaining 34 cases, more than three members.

— In 32 of 100 cases they lived in a large metropolitan area, in 21 cases in rural areas and in the remaining 47 cases in small and medium-sized towns.

— In 65 of 100 cases, the family head was a man.

Low-income families were distributed among the various regions as follows: 12 per cent in the Atlantic provinces, 32 per cent in Quebec, 31 per cent in Ontario, 17 per cent in the Prairie provinces, and seven per cent in British Columbia.

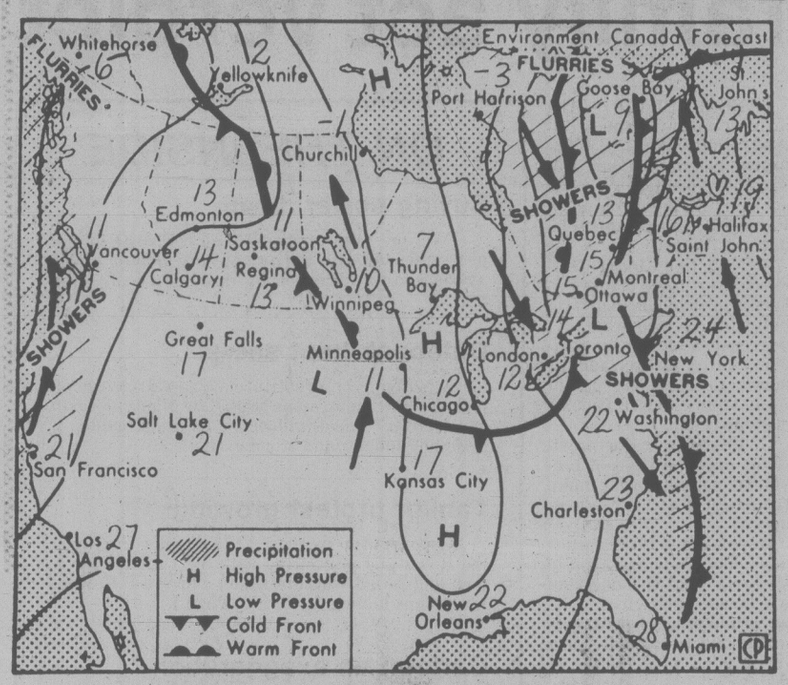
Salaries raised

Senior staff of the provincial government have been granted pay raises of about six per cent under a cabinet order.

Under the order, senior deputy ministers will now make $61,000 a year, just $1,000 less than the salary paid the premier.

Other deputies will make as much or more than their bosses in cabinet, with salaries ranging from $51,000 to $61,000 a year.

the weather



Map valid until noon Wednesday

A deep low in the Gulf of Alaska now is filling and moving northwards and remains strong enough to sustain strong winds along the coast. Skies were generally cloudy overnight in the moist air behind a frontal system which crossed the province Monday. Another vigorous system is moving towards B.C. and will reach the south coast tonight with more wind and rain. Because many weather observations are unavailable, Environment Canada forecasts are based on incomplete information.

Prostitute's datebook won't be made public

VANCOUVER (CP) — A prostitute's little brown book includes 800 names, some from "the highest level in our society," but it will never be made public, a presiding judge ruled Monday.

The book belongs to Wendy King, 31, of Vancouver, who pleaded guilty in provincial court to keeping a common bawdy house in an apartment between May and September, 1978.

It was a police investigation into King's activities, including a wiretap on her telephone and seizure of the notebook, which led last December to the resignation of former Chief Justice John Farris of British Columbia.

King is to be sentenced Oct. 30.

Judge Darrell Jones ordered the notebook sealed, saying that he was acting to avoid embarrassment to persons named in the notebook or identified in the wiretaps.

"I have ordered the clerk of the court to seal the documents," Judge Jones said. "Their very nature indicates that they should be treated with some discretion.

"It does not serve any useful purpose to make them public."

The only hint as to the names included in the book came from prosecutor Bruce Donald, who said socially prominent individuals were touched by the prostitute's activities.

Donald said the notebook contained 800 names and the wiretap transcripts referred to 378 telephone calls, of which 300 were related to prostitution. Eighty-five clients were identified.

Donald said King's apartment was an extensive operation in which King used a code for price and a code for the various types of service she supplied. She referred to jewelry as a means of describing certain sexual acts.

The prosecutor asked for a jail sentence for King, saying a fine would only represent a "licence to operate." A period of incarceration would demonstrate that her behavior was unacceptable and would not be tolerated.

Donald said King had approached her case with a "showbiz" fashion and suggested the attendant publicity indicated King has shown no remorse.

Defence lawyer Robert Gardner suggested that the publicity surrounding the case was fomented by persons inside the police department.

Gardner told the judge he considered Donald's call for a jail sentence a breach of an understanding between the two sides. He said the agreement included a stay of proceedings against Raymond Young, 35, King's co-accused.

But Donald denied vehemently that an arrangement had been made.

Gardner said many of the calls to King's apartment did not result in a sex act, adding she had only made $4,000 during the four-month period of the charge.

Group adds 4th airline

The Jim Pattison Group has agreed to buy a fourth airline operating along the B.C. coast.

The company announced Monday it has signed a takeover agreement with Gulf Air Aviation of Campbell River on Vancouver Island. Completion of the transaction is subject to approval of the Canadian transport commission.

In March, Pattison bought Airwest Airlines Ltd., of Vancouver. It then agreed to acquire Trans Provincial Airlines of Prince Rupert and Pacific Coastal Airlines of Nanaimo. The latter two takeovers still await commission approval.

The airline has 60 scheduled routes on Vancouver Island and to coastal communities including Port Hardy, Bella Coola, Ocean Falls and Alert Bay.

As well as continuing those routes, Gulf Air will serve as a feeder route to the proposed expanded service between Vancouver and Vancouver Island points which will come about with completion of the deals.

Sabotage suspected in derailment blast

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Railway officials and police are trying to figure out why 11 rail tankers rolled away from a siding, ran three kilometres downhill, then crashed and exploded, cutting the rail link between part of the Peace River country and the rest of British Columbia.

Spokesmen for B.C. Rail suggest there may have been sabotage involved.

A 430-metre wooden trestle approach to a steel bridge across the Peace River was destroyed when the runaway train derailed on a curve in the trestle shortly after midnight Saturday.

The cars exploded after tumbling about 35 metres, setting fire to the bridge's creosote-soaked timber. Six of the 67-ton tank cars carried gasoline, four were loaded with diesel fuel and one carried butane.

Companies north of the bridge in B.C.'s resource-rich northeastern corner count on the B.C. Rail line to ship their goods to southern markets and ports.

Railway officials started investigations Monday. Among the questions to be answered are:

—How did the rail cars get from a siding near Taylor, 15 kilometres south of here, onto the main line?

—Was the switch between the siding and the main track open or closed?

—Did brakes on the loaded tank cars fail or were they deliberately released?

Rail officials have estimated the damage at about $2 million, but the cost of the incident will run much higher because shipments of lumber, petroleum products and grain will be rerouted and delayed. And there could be layoffs in resource industries.

County plan rejected

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — A proposal to unify hospitals, schools and municipal functions into a county-type one-government system was turned down Monday by a majority of municipal leaders from the Fraser Valley, Squamish-Pemberton area and the Sunshine Coast.

The idea is part of several reforms being discussed with municipal governments.

The different proposals on how to reform B.C.'s 28 regional districts are contained in a 43-page discussion paper recently sent to all local elected individuals. Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm is touring B.C. to discuss the paper with municipal officials.

Once established the new type of local government would allow for comprehensive regional planning in areas smaller than the present regional districts — planning and control over such matters as schools, hospitals, sewage, water and parks — eliminating such things as school and hospital boards.

Many of the municipal representatives favored the consolidation of some services, but they found the over-all concept too radical and the idea of a one-government county-type system was dismissed 21 to 14 in a straw vote.

Before the municipal officials were three basic options that included:

—Elimination of regional districts with vast areas of B.C. reverting back to unorganized territories with improvement districts providing some services and Victoria administrating services for the bulk of the unorganized areas.

—Retention of regional districts with municipalities retaining control over their boundaries and municipal representatives along with elected rural elected people — through the weighted vote system — supplying a form of local government to rural areas.

—Formation of a county system.

Because of continued complaints about regional districts, particularly that the weighted vote gives rural areas control over some urban matters and vice-versa, there are numbers of proposed wrinkles which municipal representatives said Monday they want put into the present regional district system.

They include:

—Provision for rural committees of the regional districts that would make the sole decision on rural land questions.

—Establishment of regional district fringe committees made up of municipal representatives and representatives from immediate adjacent areas, that would have the sole decision-making power over such matters as shopping centres or the incorporation of a subdivision just outside municipal boundaries.

Mayor claims political blackballing

KITIMAT (CP) — Northwestern British Columbia may the victim of "political blackballing" by the provincial government for supporting the New Democratic Party in last spring's federal and provincial elections, says Mayor George Thom.

Thom, who has no formal ties with any party, said Monday activity in the area has ground to a halt because of a "lack of decision" at the provincial level.

The Skeena riding, in which Kitimat is located, elected New Democrat Frank Howard in last May's provincial election and New Democrat Jim Fulton in the May federal vote.

Eight lawsuits in ramming

VANCOUVER (CP) — Eight suits have been filed in the Federal Court as a result of the Oct. 12 collision in which a Japanese freighter rammed the Canadian National Railways bridge to the north side of the city's harbor.

Seven of the suits involving the Japan Erica, which collided with the bridge in heavy fog causing extensive damage, are against the pilot, Bud Jones, Captain K. Kamada, the vessel and its owners, Nissen Kisen K. K. of Tokyo.

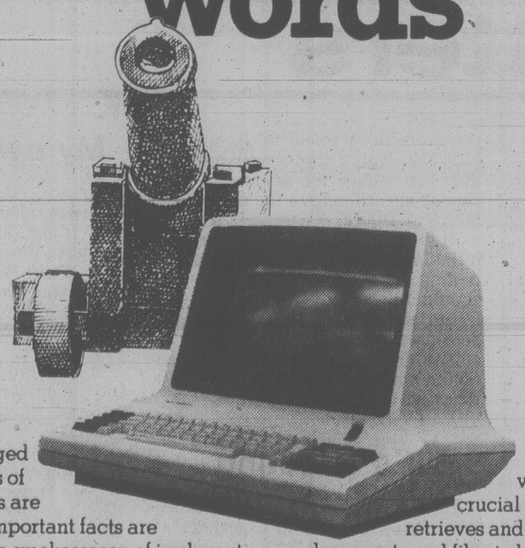
The suits cite negligence.

The plaintiffs,, who claim unspecified damages, are the CNR, James Richardson and Sons Ltd., owners of the north shore Pioneer Grain Terminal; Burlington Northern Railway; Italmare, owners of the vessel Positano; C.S.P. Foods of Burnaby; Neptune Terminals; Saskatchewan Wheat Pool and Vancouver Wharves.

The Vancouver Wharves suit names only the vessel and its owners.

Personal liability of the pilot is limited to $1,000. Under the Pilotage Act, visiting vessels are required to use a Pacific Pilotage Authority pilot.

The war on words



Business is besieged by words. Hordes of wordy documents are overrunning it. Important facts are camouflaged by a smokescreen of irrelevent information. The casualties are mounting as office productivity advances at a painstaking pace. The costs in office support staff are reaching staggering proportions. Beleaguered managers are beginning to despair.

But help is on the horizon. A powerful weapon is coming to the fore in the war on words — the Micom word processor. A weapon of truly awesome effectiveness, it makes every secretary enter the battle with renewed vigor and morale — editing, correcting and retyping documents with the strength of two. It sweeps the minefields of exploding information, clearing the way to vital business data crucial to managers. It stores, retrieves and manipulates data, documents and files to help plan their strategy.

Under the generalship of wise managers the Micom will turn the tide in business' favor. It will dramatically reduce the cost of the war on words, bringing peace to the office and prosperity to the corporate balance sheet.

The Micom word processor is a machine of demonstrated superiority, designed and built by the world leader in word processing technology. Call us and we'll be happy to unveil its secrets.

Individual rights overlooked

The provincial government's war on child abuse should be conducted without the potential that presently exists for the abuse of individual rights.

The toll-free telephone number introduced by Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy remains a worthy program. But its success, coupled with government policy to retain secret files on suspected abusers, adds up to a hazardous situation in a free society.

Since 1965 the ministry has compiled a list of some 6,500 suspected child abusers. Names and information are stored in a central registry and can, if required, be introduced as evidence in a court of law.

Under the present law, suspected child abusers aren't necessarily told that their names are on file. And even if they did know, there is no mechanism for names to be removed if the allegations prove unfounded.

What has turned out to be a good plan, is also in a sense, frightening. McCarthy's toll-free number has elicited an overwhelming response. Since its introduction this summer, the ministry has received an average of 60 complaints a day. Although less than half the calls require immediate action by social workers, all allegations are recorded. The number of parents on file is growing at an alarming rate.

The toll-free line, with provision for caller anonymity, no doubt is of service to battered and defenceless children. But by the same token any allegation that is not followed-up could be just that — an allegation from an unknown source who could have motivations that are less than honorable.

A spokesman for the ministry says that information in the special registry is confidential and that it is used only by ministry staff. However, he said that coroners and police might have occassion to use the file. Unless an individual who feels falsely accused is allowed to challenge the information, there is room for serious questions as to how bad information might be used.

There is every reason to believe the file is necessary. It allows social workers to determine if their is a history of reported child abuse within a family. They can keep tabs on suspected culprits when they decide to move. They can probably plan better protection for a child if action is undertaken.

Nevertheless there is potential for abuse of the rights of an innocent individual. That was recognized by the 1975 Berger commission on family law.

Mr. Justice Thomas Berger recommended that the registry should be given legislative status to protect the confidentiality of information. He went on to say that there should be an appeal procedure so that a parent could have his or her name removed if their is no foundation for the report.

The Ontario government used Berger's recommendations as the basis for revamping its law regulating the retention of secret files. It was an attempt to assure indvidual rights.

Human Resources officials might argue with validity that notifying suspected absuers that they are on file might lessen their effectiveness to protect battered children. It would also add more bureaucracy.

Those points however, should only persuade the provincial government to alter the existing law to offer the best protection for children without eroding the rights of an individual falsely accused.

Winderful!

Winter winds have piped up out of the west and are bringing the leaves down in droves. Green lawns have become a patchwork of browns and yellows, the victims of discarded foliage.

For the homeowners who chose to live without trees, the wind this time of year creates a problem similiar to one caused by people who refuse to leash their dogs. They too must drag rakes across the lawn, make small piles, and dispatch the fragrant nuisance.

Interest rates hurt economy

NEW YORK — No wonder Secretary of the Treasury G. William Miller has repudiated the view that the current recession already is past its halfway point. If that ever was true, Chairman Paul Volcker and the Federal Reserve Board have made certain that it no longer is.

By sharply increasing interest rates and adopting direct controls on the money supply, the Fed has ordered up a longer and more severe recession, with higher unemployment bound to result. This would be a costly policy even if Volcker were right in his prediction that it will bring down inflation, perhaps to less than 10 percent, by the end of the year.

But the so-called "Volcker package" is unlikely to do anything like that, for the primary reason that much of the inflationary boom is beyond the reach of monetary policy. The market power of big companies and big unions to set wages and prices is a good example. So is OPEC oil pricing, with another significant increase generally expected in December. So is the decontrol of domestic oil prices being carried out by President Carter.

Food prices unstable

Raw material price rises around the world contribute to inflation here. It will be surprising if new American grain sales to the Soviets do not push up food prices in this country. A huge increase in social security payroll taxes in January will increase employer costs, driving up prices, and reduce employee take-home pay, creating new pressures for catch-up wage increases.

Medical care and hospital costs are a continuing cause of the rising price index. Even higher interest rates, the most certain result of the Federal Reserve actions, are in themselves inflationary in the short run, since they increase the cost of borrowing money.

And what about the federal deficit? Many of those hailing Volcker have assured us in the past that an unbalanced budget was the main engine of inflation. But if, as is all but certain, the Fed's actions precipitate a longer and deeper recession, federal tax collections will decline with the gross national product and federal outlays for recession relief will rise steeply. The resulting increase in the deficit — upwards of $20 billion per point of unemployment — will have to be financed at the higher rates of interest decreed by the Fed, which will further increase the deficit itself.

Productivity, the lack of which is another cause of inflation, also is not improved by recession. Factories have to be operated at less than efficient levels of capacity; and capital investment falls off owing to the bad business climate.

To produce really impressive restraint on inflationary forces through monetary policy, the Fed would have to produce a credit crunch of almost unimaginable tightness, bringing business and consumer borrowing to a virtual halt and unemployment to something like Depression levels. And that state of affairs would have to be maintained for a long time.

Volcker and his colleagues may have the will to impose such a policy, but Congress and the president probably could not stand the heat from voters caught in an economy being held at a virtual standstill. Carter has already promised what he can't deliver, that the Fed actions will not cause housing workers to lose jobs. And Lane Kirkland, George Meany's successor as head of the AFL-CIO, has rightly called the Volcker package "the wrong move at the wrong time" and predicted that its impact on the poor would have to be eased.

Even if these were not the political realities, it's questionable whether such a credit squeeze would be sensible treatment for the patient's problem. In effect, one economic disaster would be substituted for another, with the benefits uncertain and long-delayed. And when Volcker confidently asserts that "the standard of living of the average American has to decline," does he realize that for many it already has — for instance, in the case of those held to pay increases of 7 percent or less, while inflation runs at 13 percent?

Union power

But some others have the market power to maintain and even increase their standards of living — for example, workers in unions with the ability to win wage increases that outstrip the rise in the cost of living. What is there in the Volcker package to impose a rough equity on the adjustments in standards of living that he calls for?

It must be said for the Fed, however, that its new attempt to put direct controls on the money supply probably was warranted by the recent credit explosion; merely making it more expensive to borrow money plainly was not having the desired effect. It should be said, too, that the Carter administration's inability or unwillingness to mount an effective attack on inflation put heavy pressure on the Fed to do something.

But if, as seems all too likely, the first of the year does not bring the relief predicted by Volcker, the buck will inevitably return to Jimmy Carter's desk. And the best course open to him then, as now, would be to ask Congress for selective wage and price controls, probably coupled with stimulative tax relief.

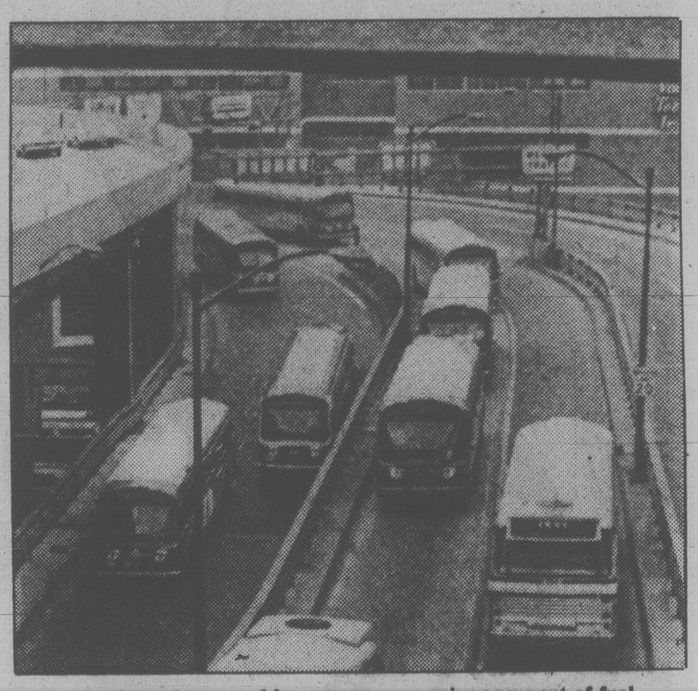
RICHARD GWYN

The price elasticity of oil

OTTAWA — During the past couple of years, the Canadian dollar has shrunk by 20 per cent compared to the U.S. dollar. Yet Canadians spend as much on holidays abroad as they ever did. And although we've never paid as much for our booze, we never enjoyed more of it.

Both commodities have turned out to be "price elastic" — like disco jumpsuits, like indoor plants . . . come to think of it, almost any product you can name. To economists, "elastic" means people are so hooked on a product that they'll stretch their budgets to buy it at almost any price.

Soon we'll discover whether we care less about oil than we do about holidays, alcohol and disco jumpsuits. By mid-November, in advance of its budget, the Clark government plans to announce an energy package of which the part most Canadians will notice will be an increase by way of an excise tax, of up to 30 cents on a gallon of gasoline at the pump.



Study shows increased bus use saves a minor amount of fuel.

An era ends

What's more, the price of oil at the wellhead will increase next year by $4 a barrel. At the pump, this will add another 12 cents to the gallon.

Our era of cheap energy will end.

But the main thing to be said about the new grim era, however, is that no one knows what it will be like, indeed whether oil will turn out to be price-elastic.

As most Canadians know, we consume twice as much energy as do the Swedes, who are as affluent and as cold as we, and even more in comparison with other Europeans who are as rich, but warmer. About this, we feel guilty. Gas guzzling has replaced gluttony among the seven deadly sins. (Cigarette smoking has replaced lust.)

The comparison with Sweden, while odious, is irrelevant. True, Sweden has raised its oil prices to world levels, as Canada has not. Yet in the untroubled years before 1973 when the Arabs returned from the Harvard Business School with degrees in cartel management, the Swedes still consumed only half as much energy as we did.

Price isn't the key difference between the Swedes and us. It is culture.

They may not be worthier, but they aren't North Americans — and that's the vital difference.

Consider public transit. For years, right-thinking people have argued that instead of battling our way to work in private cars, we should coast to it in buses, commuter trains and subways. As part of its energy package, the Clark government will pump some of its excise tax revenues into subsidies for public transit systems.

The idea is admirable. But it is irrelevant. According to a study by David Brooks, head of Energy Probe here and a former director of the Office of Energy Conservation, the maximum energy savings by a general switch from automobile to public transit will be two days' production by an average-sized oil refinery.

This finding, Brooks admits, "surprised and disappointed" him. One problem, he realized, is that buses, because they stop and start a lot, consume a lot of energy. Another is that since people still will need cars anyway, for shopping and for recreation, still will drive to work rather than leave the car all day in the driveway.

In fact, as Brooks points out, the energy saved by a switch to public transit is trivial in comparison to the amount saved by a switch from large to small cars. It's been calculated that an increase in automobile fuel efficiency of less than half a mile a gallon would save more energy than a doubling of transit patronage.

Now we come to the nub of the matter. The real reason the new energy era probably won't be that different is that it won't be that grim.

Today, as the pump meter clicks off about $1 for each gallon, we grumble. We ought to applaud our friendly, neighborhood multinational.

Back in 1950, the meter ticked at less than half the speed — 41 cents a gallon. Since then, inflation has reared its ugly head. In 1950 values, today's $1 gasoline costs us just 35 cents. (The comparable gasoline prices for 1960 and 1970, translated back into 1950 prices, were 32 cents and 19 cents a gallon respectively.)

Upon the foundation of three decades of energy priced as if it were water, we've built an economy, and even a lifestyle, of automobiles, holidays abroad, alcohol and indoor plants.

Shock tactics

Don't expect any of us to give any of this up either quickly or easily.

The irony here is that the Clark government is convinced it at last has gathered the political courage, which its Liberal predecessor lacked, to shock us into change. Yet in 1950 terms, the new price of oil at the pump still will be less than 50 cents a gallon. This indeed is a bit higher than back then, except that it represents a smaller share of today's much larger incomes. (As a bonus, today's cars give us many more miles to the gallon.)

To get to where the Swedes are, where would we have to go? To about $3 a gallon, at a guess. Or more, since that's where the Swedes now are. Theirs is a conservation culture, ours is a cash one. To acquire their conserver ethic we're going to have to charge ourselves more — incomparably more, indeed, before oil prices become "inelastic," and our lifestyles snap.

Let's barter

Less than a year ago Jack Barbeau, the eminent tax lawyer from Vancouver, spoke to a group of us in Victoria. He said that within the next few months (early in '79) the U.S. prime rate would go to 13 per cent, with Canada the usual one per cent ahead. He also predicted a few months later the U.S. prime rate would go to 14-15 per cent (this indicates 18 per cent for short term loans). Subsequently in a conversation with me at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon we confirmed that his predictions were accurate.

Mr. Barbeau made the point that the high interest rates restrict cash available in business. As a result bartering becomes rapidly more popular because it organizes the exchange of goods without the need for cash. "It is," he said, "a very effective means of achieving greater efficiency in merchandising."

As interest rates soar, the only people who make money are the bankers. As someone who is involved in organizing a barter system among a group of business people, I can assure your readers that it works and it increases sales considerably.

Mr. Barbeau is a tax advisor to the Premier and to the federal government, and therefore is eminently qualified in these matters. — Kay Lines, 829 Broughton Street.

Cost of living

I am 62 years old and receive a disability pension from Ottawa. This pension is increased at scheduled intervals to compensate for the increase in the cost of living. My cheque from Ottawa at present is $165.15. The B.C. department of human resources adds another $117 and some cents, making my monthly income $282 and some cents. I have been asked by the human resources department to declare any increases from Ottawa, apparently so they can reduce the amount of their cheque accordingly to the established mincome figure.

It seems to me that in this period of inflation when everything around us is costing more, the B.C. government should be making its own cost-of-living adjustment to avoid placing pensioners or human resource recipients in the position of facing a reduction in purchasing power. — Leslie O. Priestly, 1321 Broad Street.

It's cheating

I am a regular reader of your esteemed newspaper and especially at election times I read the letters-to-the-editor column to get an educated political viewpoint from the grass roots. I also voted for the winners in the last election. Now Bill Bennett tells us it was all a dirty trick for which he takes the blame. Bloody cheating, he's made a fool of all of us! — P. K. Bhattacharjee, 1815 Fairburn Drive.

By association

While I think it reprehensible that an elected candidate should cross the floor of the House, after having been elected to carry out a stated political aim, or to support that of his party, I would make an exception in the case of the recent "letters scandal."

A continued association with a party that is guilty of such tactics is guilty of a form of organized crime, for that's what it is. It is a time for any decent-minded member of the legislative body to see that our present provincial government is defeated. The alternative is to be guilty by association. — H. G. Cook, 545 Transit Road.

My own opinions

An anonymous postcard commented on my "silence" about the so-called dirty tricks stories.

I have three answers:

1. While this tempest in a teapot was taking place, I was enjoying the magnificent views of the seven wonders of the world, e.g. the U.S.A. "canyons."

2. My editorial correspondence, always hand-written, has always been inspired by my very own personal beliefs.

3. Anonymous mail has only one place to go: namely, the garbage.

As a free citizen in a free country, I shall go on expressing my own opinions. — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

Cuban babble

According to Fidel Castro's recent babble at the United Nations' General Assembly, western countries, particularly the United States of America and Israel, are the most [illegible] places on the planet Earth.

My only comment regarding Castro and his babbling is, the Cuban dictator can be nothing more than a trouble-loving war-monger whose only claim to fame — more likely infamy — is being able to harness, or influence the harnessing of the weak.
— J. Wickstrom, 3264 Shelley Street.

Play fair

If Socreds depend upon "dirty tricks" to get in or stay in power, we don't want them. Everything they do must be seen and known to be above board and honorable. — W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful St.

Ellen Goodman

Conscience pinched

In the photograph, she is holding an emaciated child. There have been, surely, enough of them, a ready supply of emaciated children in Mother Teresa's life. She has lived in a sea of sick, a Black Hole of Calcutta's poor.

Even now, if she were to distribute every dollar of her $192,000 Nobel Peace Prize, one by one, she would run out of money long before she ran out of poor in that one teeming city.

The portrait of this woman is absolutely awesome. She is no statesman who makes a treaty in an air-conditioned chamber and then goes home to a ticker-tape parade. Here is a woman who gets up every morning of her life to tend endless streams of victims of life's longest war of attrition. Without an expectation of victory.

Most of us in her place could have stood a week or a two-year tour of duty before being overwhelmed by pain and a sense of futility. There are times we all look at good work and good workers as if they were shovelling sand into the wind. But here is a woman who always sees people.

So, the awarding of the Nobel Prize for Peace to Mother Teresa is a pinch at our consciences — that unpopular and obsolete part of our ethical anatomy. People today don't talk about their consciences and how to appease them; they talk about guilt-trips and how to avoid them.

But Mother Teresa reminds us how often we think of the poor of the world as sand. Most of us live according to self-interest. The truly selfless are as rare as Nobel Prize winners.

But it is a question of how wide our definition of self-interest is and how much it rules our lives.

It is hard, at a time when many North Americans feel desperate about their heating bills or their ability to buy a home of their own, to think about the emaciated child. It's hard when we haven't eliminated poverty in America to think about Calcutta. I don't fault this. It just is.

We can't measure one person's pain against another's. But it isn't hard to measure one person's standard of living against another. The anxiety of a couple worried about food is utterly different.

When the Nobel committee awarded its peace prize to Mother Teresa (and I do not forget that they also awarded one to Henry Kissinger), they did so because "poverty and hunger and distress also constitute a threat to peace."

TERESA . . . sea of sick

The gap between the rich and the poor of the world makes the U.S. look like an egalitarian utopia. The gap between the rich and the poor of the world is a true source of insecurity and hostility. We are the rich and it is harder and harder to get away from it.

It's odd to quote Fidel Castro and Pope John Paul II in one breath. But in their back-to-back visits to the U.S. they both gave the same message: "Some countries possess abundant resources while others have nothing."

However dubious Castro's credentials or motivations, his words ring true and we know it. "I have come to warn that, if we do not eliminate our present injustices and inequalities peacefully and wisely, the future will be apocalypic. Bombs may kill the hungry, the sick and the ignorant, but they cannot kill hunger, disease and ignorance. Nor can they kill the righteous rebellion of the people; and in the holocaust, the rich who are the ones who have the most to lose in this world will also die."

Mother Teresa said, "The great thing about the poor is that they are not discontented. They don't hate us despite their immense suffering. It is a mystery we cannot understand."

Perhaps she is right. Perhaps they are too tired or too concerned with survival for hatred. But I doubt it. When "have nots" see the "haves," they want to know why.

The Nobel Prize award and the words of two visitors from two different worlds suggest that each year we need a broader definition of self-interest: one that sees the world as our neighborhood, one that sees our conscience as a guide, not as a guilt-trip.

"I have been told I spoil the poor by my work," says Mother Teresa. "Well at least one congregation is spoiling the poor, because everyone else is spoiling the rich."

Few of us are or can be as selfless or dedicated as this woman. But perhaps, for a few minutes, she helped us wipe the sand from our eyes, so we could see the people.

Astrology: Its growing popularity challenges gap at core of modern science

By THEODORE ROSZAK

(Roszak is professor of history at California State University. His latest book is Person-Planet: The Creative Disintegration of Industrial Society. He wrote this article for Newsday)

In the summer of 1975, the Humanist Association of the United States published a letter signed by 186 leading scientists (including several Nobel laureates) lamenting the growing American fascination with astrology as a sign of rampant irrationality.

Their concern went unheeded: two years later, a Gallup poll reported that over 30 million Americans admitted to "believing in" astrology.

That trend was so distressing that, a few years ago, a Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal was formed to patrol the embattled frontiers of reason. Its publication, Zetetic, devotes a good measure of its energy to debunking the predictive claims of astrology, the I Ching and Tarot cards.

That's easy to do. As fortune-telling devices, none has an impressive record; none has ever come up to a decent standard of empirical verification. What is much harder and more interesting to understand — especially in light of that fact — is the influential and enduring role these divination systems have played in human culture. And not only at the vulgar level.

The I Ching, after all, is a monument of Chinese civilization comparable in stature to the Bible. And astrology has only in the last few centuries been relegated to the lunatic fringe by critical minds. For centuries before that, the study of the zodiac held a proud place in the cosmology and culture of western society.

Might it not be worth asking what so many capable minds of the past found in studies like astrology?

That at least is the spirit in which many intelligent people have been approaching the field and other occult systems in recent years. They have been attempting to salvage something of value from an ancient lore that we may have too hastily written off as an intellectual offence. Until one knows exactly what they may have found there, it would seem to be difficult to make a rational criticism of their quest, let alone to lead them in the opposite direction.

Before there were newspapers in the western world, there were almanacs, the earliest printed periodical literature to achieve a mass audience. And the heart of the almanac (though often nearly swamped by the folklore, anecdotes and old wives tales) was astrological advice.

Today, the horoscope lingers on as a marginal amusement in magazines and daily papers; but both magazines and newspapers originally grew out of the horoscope, which, until well into the 18th century, was a reputable decision-making device avidly used by the educated and untutored alike.

Ironically, it was the very popularity of astrology that led to its demise as a major cultural force. From the 18th century on, the almanacs began routinely reporting more and more of the new developments in astronomy. In so doing, they were introducing their readers to a world view that was more hostile to celestial magic than Christianity had ever been. The almanacs thus unwittingly nudged astrology toward irrelevance, if not intellectual heresy.

The essential teaching of astrology, reaching back to the ancient worship of the stars, was that of spiritual communion between the human and the heavenly.

This was not a crude determinism ruling out free will or moral choice. Rather, people were understood to be "inclined" by a sort of celestial genetics — swayed or pre-disposed by complex cosmic forces that impinged on their temperaments.

Something of that teaching lingers on in one indispensible word we inherit from astrology: influence — the subtle emanations of the stars. It is hard to imagine doing without this word, which uniquely denotes the way non-physical things — ideas, values, thoughts, dreams — produce effects in the world.

In astrology, it was believed that the heavenly spheres were in the nature of intelligences that could influence the human mind and body — a view that called up an organic sense of nature that mingled cosmology and psychology. A vital correspondence was understood to exist between the human soul (the microcosm) and the vast world soul of the cosmos (the macrocosm).

Modern science rejected this traditional organic vision. It pictured the universe as a machine, magnificently crafted but dead, impersonal, alien. It became progressively more difficult for scientists to find room in their clockwork universe for intelligence, will or sympathy — except as freakish attributes of the heart.

Celestial nature came to seem wholly unlike human nature; the two were divorced from one another, subjects to be studied by radically different methods. To the one side, the world "out there," as illuminated by art and the humanities. And never the twain shall meet.

Worse still, as time went on, the arts and humanities proved timid guardians of their province. They steadily yielded ground to the authority of the new social and behavioral sciences, deferring to these as more reliable forms of knowledge.

To a large degree, the modern fascination with astrology — even in its crudest forces — stems from a growing nostaligia for that older, more unified sense of nature is which the sun, moon and stars were experienced as a vast network of living consciousness. More than serving as a decision-making system, astrolgoy has always offered the sentimental comfort of a humane universe, a home that cares for our needs and aspirations.

If any great number of people now employ astrology and other occult lore to make decisions, I suspect it is because — with some justification — they have became disenchanted with the alternatives the modern world offers them for making the big choices of life. If they seem to turn from reason, it may be because reason (or a particularly narrow notion of rationality) has been disastrously oversold, especially by those for whom science and technological progress have become an ideology.

What, after all, is a purely "rational" way to choose a career, or a marriage partner? How many of us believe that a gimmick like computer dating guarantees better relationships than comparing horoscopes?

Or, in the realm of public policy, consider the cost-benefit techniques that led to the building of the Three Mile Island nuclear plant or the supersonic transport; the same theory strategy that governs our thermonuclear arsenal and now counsels us to construct a monstrosity like the MX missile system: the geopolitical analysis that persuaded "the best and the brightest" to wage the Vietnam War.

You may well finish wondering if these "rational" methods are any more reliable than old-fashioned stargazing.

Every society has its accredited rituals for making complex and imponderable decisions. How do we, in fact, make tough choices? We manipulate some set of approved symbols and assumptions that help us mull things over and exercise conviction. We don't so much choose as commit ourselves to what we are inclined to prefer as a matter of taste, value, self-interest. Then we dress the choice up in the prevailing fashion to convince ourselves and the world that we did everything that could be expected. Finally we dedicate ourselves to making our choice work, come hell or high water.

Computer forecasting is one way to achieve commitment; astrology has been another. In different social contexts, each has been considered rational and practical. But, of course, life is always too unfathomable to guarantee any system more than hit-and-miss success. That is why uncommited skepticism is the safest position — and the most sterile.

What, then, is superstition?

It is commiting oneself rigidly to any system — cost-benefit analysis or Tarot cards — to the exclusion of prudent flexibility, common sense and moral honesty. There is no humanly becoming way to get through life without intelligent adaption and ethical responsibility, without a sense of complexity and an openness to surprise.

It was never beyond astrology to allow for such plasticity; at their most sophisticated, divination systems were never practised as fortune telling so much as what we would now call "counselling." They were ornate frameworks for weighing the pros and cons, the pitfalls and opportunities.

Above all, they were systems of self-evaluation, a way of examining one's capacities in the crises of life. They led people to ask: Who am I? What are my talents and potentialities? What are my chances of coping?

For a growing number of people, the rich imagery of the occult traditions has become a more inspirational way of talking about emotions, values, motivations and goals than conventional psychiatry.

The astrological universe is, after all, the universe of Greco-Roman myth, of Dante, Chaucer, Shakespeare, Milton, Blake; it has poetry and philosophy built into it.

Where Freud, for example, offers a colorless psychic menagerie of ids, egos, superegos and complexes, astrology unfolds the evocative symbols of the zodiac, the great archetypal images of the sun and moon, the mythological resonance of the planets. To speak of masculine and feminine impulses with reference to Mars and Venus instantly brings myth and poetry back into psychology.

Astrology has never appealed to me either as a predictive device or a psychological vocabulary. But whenever I hear it condemned by those who see it as no more than a superstition, I am inclined to a small reminder:

The continued popularity of astrology points challengingly to the vast gap that still exists at the core of modern science. After three centuries of astonishing expansion, our science has still found no graceful place among its quarks and quasars for the inner life — the life of aspiration, value, moral choice. It cannot chastise the wicked, comfort the dying or nurture the powers of creative vision.

Yet these are also facts of nature, truths of experience that will not be explained away by behavioral findings or electro-chemical analysis.

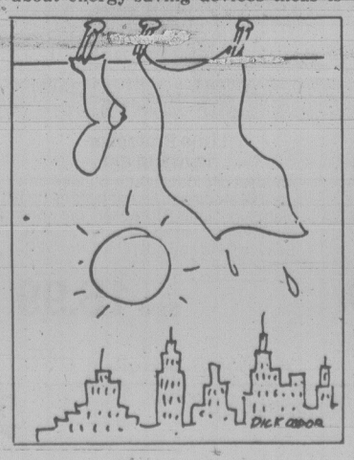
As long as science excludes the needs of the heart, our culture will remain tragically divided, and people will look elsewhere for the wisdom they cannot find in test tubes or telescopes.

Hang 'em high

By ALVIN TRESSELT

(A letter to the editor of The New York Times)

In the spate of articles I read lately about energy-saving devices there is one that has never been mentioned, namely, a length of rope, better known as a clothesline. A dryer consumes a great deal of energy, whereas God's sunshine and fresh air are absolutely free.



In spite of the claims of the various fabric fresheners on the market, nothing smells so sweet and fresh as a bundle of laundry just off the line, having spent hours blowing free. Towels, perhaps, benefit from a tumble-dry, but just about anything else, including the wash-and-dries where the lable says to tumble in the dryer, can certainly enjoy the fresh-air treatment.

It may take a bit of time to hang things on the clothesline, but the savings and the esthetic delight of getting into a bed between air-dried sheets are well worth it.

Take advantage of the freest form of solar energy, and save the dryer for cold or inclement weather.

Three more enter city race

Three more candidates have announced they are running for alderman in the Nov. 17 Victoria civic election.

Incumbents Bill McElroy, 33, and Bob Wright have filed nomination papers, along with lawyer Doug Christie, 33, a veteran of provincial politics.

McElroy declared Monday and said he will run on his record. In 1975 he ran for mayor but lost to Mike Young. He was successful in his bid for a seat on council two years later.

He is chairman of council's traffic and transportation committee, and has also been a vocal proponent of higher salaries for aldermen.

McElroy, a resident of Fairfield, is manager of the Marigold housing co-operative in Saanich.

He said Monday the biggest problem facing Victoria in the coming years is to provide housing for people and backed the city's long-term plan to provide downtown housing for 6,000 people in the area west of Cook between Fort and Pandora.

Council should also watch closely the redevelopment of the Inner Harbor to ensure developers keep to the human scale the area has now, added McElroy.

Wright, an outspoken tourist operator and marina owner, is travelling in Europe and mailed his nomination papers in on Friday, the first allowable day to file.

He has served on council since 1975, the last two years as chairman of the key land-use planning and zoning committee.

Recently, he took the job of chairman of the ad hoc Chinatown committee which last month unveiled plans for a major facelift of Chinatown.

Christie is a criminal lawyer who may be better known as a spokesman for western Canadian independence. He ran in the Esquimalt-Port Renfrew riding on the separatist ticket in the May 10 provincial election.

He said Tuesday his campaign will be pitched towards the concerns of the ordinary citizen.

"I want to see that council does justice by the citizens of Victoria. My experience is that there is a certain indifference to the needs of ordinary citizens," he said.

Taxes and spending should be held down, he said.

"It's very nice to talk in these altruistic terms. A lot of politicians buy votes with these schemes but they have to be paid for.

"More could be done by dealing with individual citizens than taking their money and spending it."

He said council applies arbitrary rules and decisions that hurt the little guy, "and I would include some developers."

"Arbitrariness and inflexibility — these are the things I've seen over the years."

Three incumbent aldermen — Murray Glazier, John Hayes and Bill Tindall — are running for mayor this year

Ex-mayor takes out nomination papers

A repeat of the 1977 municipal election is shaping up in Saanich with the re-appearance of former mayor Ed Lum on the political scene.

Lum, who took out nomination papers Monday, said today he will make a statement on Thursday as to what his intentions are, although it is almost certain he will be again run for mayor.

In 1977 Lum and incumbent Mayor Mel Couvelier squared off with the later winning handily.

Couvelier said Saturday he will stand for re-election but hasn't yet filed papers.

Ernest MacGregor, a retired brigadier-general and a director of the Cadboro Bay Residents Association, is the only mayoralty candidate who has filed papers.

In the aldermanic race, former alderman Ian Cass has filed nomination papers.

Two others have announced their candidacy — Dr. Hal Knight, a former Greater Victoria School Board trustee, and Judy Nyquist, former administrator of Arbutus Crafts and longtime worker with the B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children.

Four seats are open.

Incumbents Howard Sturrock and Geoffrey Vantreight are expected to make another bid for seats on council but Ald. Fred Severson and David Paterson have indicated they will not be in the running this time.

$250,000 for Crystal from gov't

An extra $250,000 to provide furniture, a backup greenhouse, the bird and reptile collection and to finish exterior work on the Crystal Garden project has been authorized by cabinet.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis said it brings the final cost of the project to $2.72 million, just $10,000 under the city of Victoria's estimate done four years ago, covering the reconstruction costs but not the animals and other features.

Two for mayor in N. Saanich

A two-way race has developed for the mayoralty in North Saanich.

Ald. Eric Sherwood announced Monday he will challenge Mayor George Westwood in the Nov. 17 election.

Westwood filed nomination papers on Monday and Sherwood is expected to follow suit later in the week.

Nominations close Oct. 29.

So far no candidates have announced for alderman.

Besides Westwood the only person who has filed papers is Rubymay Parrott who will run for another term on school board.

Meanwhile, in Central Saanich two women have announced their candidacy for aldermen.

Mrs. Lae King of 765 Harding Lane in Brentwood Bay and Mrs. Ruth Arnaud of 6509 Rodolph filed nomination papers on Monday.

Mrs. King is a housewife; Mrs. Arnaud is co-ordinator of homemaker services for the human resources ministry on the Saanich Peninsula.

Three seats on council are open.

Incumbents Percival Lazarz, John Sharpe and Francis Waring have not yet indicated whether they will seek re-election.

There is no race for mayor this year. Mayor Jean Butler was elected to a two-year term last November.

Opposition mounts to tankers on B.C. coast

Times News Services

Opposition to increased U.S. tanker traffic on the B.C. coast is growing with the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and two B.C. wildlife groups joining the battle.

And Prime Minister Joe Clark has made it known he will express Canada's concern to President Carter when the U.S. leader visits Canada next month.

The fishermen's union decided Monday to intervene at a National Energy Board (NEB) hearing against Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co.'s plan to carry Alaskan oil by tanker to an oil port to be built on Juan de Fuca Strait.

Representatives of two B.C. wildlife organizations and an environmental protest group have asked Clark to seek a delay in the early December deadline for a U.S. decision on a system for moving Alaska oil to the U.S. midwest.

A letter was sent to Clark by the Terrace Alliance Against Supertankers to Kitimat (TAASK), the B.C. Wildlife Federation and the Steelhead Society after a meeting Sunday.

The letter says the meeting was called because the groups are afraid Canadian support may be granted for the Trans Mountain proposal before adequate environmental impact studies are taken.

The NEB Board is currently holding hearings in Vancouver on the Trans Mountain application which would involve increased oil tanker traffic along the West Coast and a pipeline from Low Point in Washington State to Edmonton.

Foothills Oil Pipe Line Ltd. had proposed an entirely overland route, eliminating the need for tankers, but suspended its proposal recently after U.S. authorities indicated a preference for tanker systems.

Carter is to decide in December which project should go ahead.

In an aide-memoire given to Washington Saturday and made public Monday, the external affairs department declared:

"The government of Canada remains firm in its objective, as stated on Sept. 28, of minimizing the risk of environmental damage on the west coast from oil tanker traffic and of seeking means whereby current risks, including those in the sensitive inner waters of Juan de Fuca Strait and Puget Sound, may if possible be reduced. . . .

"The president of the United States will be visiting Ottawa on Nov. 9 and 10, 1979. The prime minister of Canada looks forward to this opportunity to discuss the full west-to-east pipelines question with him at that time."

Officials of the 8,000-member fishermen's union said the UFAWU decided to intervene at the NEB hearings after learning of testimony from a Canadian Coast Guard official about a proposed vessel management scheme for the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

"Fishermen's lives are in danger," Bert Ogden, union safety director, said in an interview. "There have already been several cases of near-collisions between freighters and fishing boats in the strait."

Coast Guard official M. A. Turner told the hearing last week that a set of shipping lanes established in conjunction with a network of radar coverage for ships entering the strait already is being completed.

The hearing was told it is hoped that adherence to shipping lanes, now voluntary, will become mandatory when the Intergovernmental Maritime Consultative Organization approves of the system.

But Ogden said the UFAWU will only agree to a mandatory requirement if commercial fishermen are swept out of the strait every time a ship passes through the lanes.

Nadine Asante, spokesman for the Terrace environmental group, says in the letter to Clark she wants his government to introduce legislation to deal with the risks of proposed and existing tanker traffic. Such legislation might include an oil-slick contingency plan paid for by the oil companies using coastal waters.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, U.S. Ambassador Kenneth Curtis says he expects President Carter will back the all-American oil route from Alaska despite Canadian objections.

But he indicated in an interview Monday there is an outside chance the Trans Mountain proposal will still win out.

Where were environmentalists?

Mayor Mike Young acknowledged Monday the city may have neglected to keep a close watch on oil pipeline and tanker hearings but also wondered where the environmental spokesmen have been.

He was commenting on statements made by former MP David Anderson last week that it's unbelievable Victoria and other municipalities aren't represented at the National Energy Board hearings in Vancouver regarding an Alaskan oil pipeline proposal.

"Where's Mike Young? Where are all our civic leaders from the capital region? Why are they not here fighting this thing?" asked Anderson, the main spokesman for the movement to keep oil tankers from sailing down the B.C. coast.

The mayor said a case can be made for claiming the city is remiss in not watching the pipeline issue more closely, "but on the other hand, frankly it's a complex and perplexing affair."

On the possibility of heavy tanker traffic coming down the coast and past Victoria, the mayor said:

"We're obviously concerned. We've made inquiries and have information available."

But he said that it was odd that Anderson himself has never written to inform the city on the topic.

"If David Anderson, who is a self-acknowledged expert in this matter, was really concerned about eliciting the city's support, it would have been helpful to make some representations to us," said Young.

"How about a four-line letter or even a two-page letter?"

The city has received a number of submissions from various oil groups "which have to be suspect from a propaganda point of view," but the environmentalists haven't done enough on the other side to inform the city, he added.

"It's an exhaustive and expensive business to keep tabs on all the oil hearings taking place around North America. It's difficult for the city to dedicate itself to this task and also accomplish its ordinary business.

"We could have used some assistance from David and others."

Former executive dies at 86

Ernest William Arnott, who was vice-president of the Vancouver Island division of the former B.C. Electric, died Monday in Victoria.

Arnott, 86, was a former president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce and the Union Club.

His wife, Ena, predeceased him.

Funeral services will be held in the Lady Chapel, Christ Church Cathedral on Thursday at 3 p.m.

He is survived by his brother, Clarence (Chub) Arnott of Vancouver, a sister-in-law, Mrs. Lyall Adair Choate of Victoria, and his late wife's aunt, Mrs. Phyllis H. Hand, also of Victoria.

Steel firm sale eyed to Japan

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Kaiser Steel Corp., which has suffered a string of losses it blamed partly on foreign steel imports, said today it is discussing the possible sale of "a substantial portion of the company's assets" to a Japanese steelmaker.

Kaiser said it is holding the talks with Nippon Kokan K. K., Japan's second-largest steel producer.

Kaiser said discussions are in an early stage and gave no details as to prices or assets that might be included.

Kaiser, the ninth-largest U.S. steelmaker, has reported 13 consecutive quarters of losses from its steelmaking operations.

"We have entered these discussions to see if by combining the strengths of each company, we might be able to arrive at an agreement which works to the long-term benefit of all the parties involved," Edgar Kaiser Jr., the U.S. company's president and chief executive officer, said.

The company said it expects that it would be a number of weeks before the discussions might result in any agreement.

B.C. plans to appeal verdict on Family Act

order for maintenance of the wife and son.

Mr. Justice Hutcheon, following a comprehensive study of existing family law and the effect of the British North America Act in establishing the basis for it, held that B.C. went beyond its jurisdiction in creating its family act legislation.

He issued an order prohibiting Judge Boyle from proceeding with the husband-and-wife case before him on the three family court sections now ruled invalid.

Moir had argued that questions of custody and access were reserved for the higher courts such as Supreme Court or County Court. Mr. Justice Hutcheon noted that this was a conclusion reached earlier this year by Provincial Court Judge Phil Govan.

"It is important to note that the issues raised in this application do not bring into question the ability of the province to make laws concerning the custody of children, maintenance, or the occupation of the family home," said Mr. Justice Hutcheon.

"The sole question, as it relates to each matter, is whether jurisdiction to determine that matter may be given to provincial court, the members of which are provincial appointees."

Dick Vogel, associate deputy attorney-general, said the province has been trying to expand the provincial courts' jurisdiction.

"The reasoning is that provincial courts are available to all centres of the province, are relatively cheaper and the process (is) more expeditious," he said.

He said the government may have to await a constitutional amendment or to appoint judges with a specialized jurisdiction to County Court.

Police disciplined

She said she told Jim Smith that some of his police officers were aggravating the street kids problem.

"There was one kid beaten up three times," she said in an interview. He was taken by police out to a deserted part of town near the Inner Harbor the last time and the beating was so severe, he was taken to hospital for treatment.

A letter of complaint was sent to the police board by Wakeham but she said nothing came of it.

"I didn't even get an acknowledgement."

Some police have also harassed people with verbal abuse, she said. One young ex-convict just out of prison in the spring this year was told things like: "I thought we told you we didn't want to see your face around here any more. Wouldn't it be sad if they found you dead one morning?"

"Stupid, nasty little boy comments," said Wakeham. "And he did have a gun."

After several encounters with police like this he became very nervous, said Wakeham. He said he was going to use the gun.

"I really thought he was going to blow away a cop. A policeman could have been shot."

This series of incidents prompted her to call Ald. Robin Blencoe to get city hall interested in the street kids.

Council later held a special meeting at which several street kids told their stories to the mayor and aldermen. It resulted in Mayor Mike Young setting up a special youth committee to deal with the problem.

Wakeham, who has taken a six-month leave of absence after four years as a community worker in View Royal, Esquimalt and Victoria West, said also that a general change in police philosophy is required.

"We're having to take on an adversary relationship against the police. It's so unnecessary.

"We spend an awful lot of time confronting them, protecting kids from them — silly kind of stuff," she said.

She also criticized the police board, the civilian agency chaired by the mayor and charged with a supervisory role over the police force.

Although several aldermen and even Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving came out to see firsthand the problems and talk with the street kids, no one from the police board expressed any interest, she said.

The board should be pushing for more emphasis on team policing and prevention work. "They should all be out of their squad cars and on the beat."

"Probably the best that could be said about the present police administration is its lack of direction. The police board has unfortunately not enough diversity and background to set goals and objectives that meet present needs.

"We should not be looking at merely enlarging the community relations team — we should be developing a community relations approach to all policing."

HOLDS DENTURES FIRM WITHOUT DAILY "FIXINGS"

Snug Cushions hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks

No more "fixings" every morning with messy powders or creams. Even if dentures need "fixing" after every meal, here's important news. Snug cushions restore dentures' holding power so dentures stay comfortably tight for weeks. Snug, the soft, effective temporary aid, forms a "comfort bond" between dentures and gums. Sticks to dentures, not to gums. Rinse, scrub or soak Snug fresh and clean. Easy to remove, but won't wash off or flake away. So, end daily "fixings"! Use Snug to hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks.

Phoney-letters probe spreads to B.C. interior

Kelly has resigned and Mackay is on an extended holiday while the Socred caucus decides what to do about her.

McDiarmid said police are looking into the tape and he indicated charges could arise from the comments on the tape.

"The tape is really the starting point," he said.

He said police also are looking into the letters sent by Norm Hobson of Nanaimo.

Hobson has admitted sending letters using his sister's name and an old family address which is now a vacant lot.

Asked if the Hobson incident is different because he had permission to use his sister's name, McDiarmid said permission cannot be granted to commit forgery.

Bill King (NDP—Shuswap-Revelstoke) also said he found a phoney letter last May in the weekly Salmon Arm Observer

"We didn't do anything about it at that time because we thought it was an isolated incident," King said.

A letter printed in The Daily Colonist above the name of well-known NDP supporter Gordon Townsend criticized a former NDP cabinet minister and a letter printed in The Vancouver Sun criticized outgoing human rights director Kathleen Ruff. The Vancouver letter was signed by Jane Hudson, a UBC professor.

Cartoon wasn't meant literally: lawyer

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A lawyer for the Victoria Times argued Monday that a political cartoon found to have libelled former human resources minister Bill Vander Zalm would be seen by the public as a gross exaggeration and not literally.

Donald Farquhar told the B.C. Court of Appeal a B.C. Supreme Court judge applied a literal interpretation to the cartoon.

Farquhar is representing the Times in its appeal against the decision last January of Mr. Justice F. Craig Munroe who ruled that the cartoon depicting Vander Zalm was libellous and awarded him $3,500 damages and court costs.

The appeal is being heard by a five-man court headed by Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz. The other judges are P.D. Seaton, E.E. Hinkson, W.A. Craig and J.S. Aikens.

A five-member appeal court is unusual. Appeals are normally heard by three judges and five judges are only called in when there is a constitutional question or when the court is being asked to reverse an earlier decision of its own.

When Farquhar completed his case, Nemetz told Rodney Taylor, counsel for Vander Zalm, that the appeal would resume this morning because of the unique circumstances of the case and possibly of law.

The appellants, in addition to the newspaper, are former publisher Stuart Underhill, editor Barbara McLintock and cartoonist Bob Bierman.

The cartoon, which appeared June 22, 1978, depicted a person picking the wings off flies. The person had a tag pinned on his lapel reading Minister of Human Resources. There was no caption.

Mr. Justice Munroe agreed with Vander Zalm's contention that the cartoon portrayed the then minister of human resources as a cruel and sadistic person.The newspaper said it was not defamatory, but if it was, then it was fair comment on a matter of public interest.

The case is almost without parallel in the Commonwealth. The only case cited at the trial involved a 1911 cartoon when the New Zealand Times was cleared of libel in a jury decision. A subsequent appeal was dismissed.

On appeal, one of the judges said politicians ought not to be sensitive even about defamatory matter. Public men must put up with laughing, ridicule and sneering.

But Taylor argued that the New Zealand Times case had not established a special category in law for political cartoons but simply on appeal it was held that the jury was justified in its decision that the cartoon, about a member of Parliament, was not libellous.

Farquhar argued Monday that Mr. Justice Munroe applied a subjective rather than objective test as to whether the cartoon was defamatory.

It was particularly important that the judge give consideration to the circumstances surrounding and prior to publication of the cartoon. Vander Zalm had established himself as a controversial politician and had been the subject of many critical cartoons and editorials.

The judge said the cartoon was not amusing but that was his personal view and not the determination of what an ordinary, reasonable person may have thought.

The judge did not give any or adequate, consideration to the fact it was a political cartoon.

Farquhar said it was only reasonable that those who did not share Vander Zalm's political views would have found it amusing and those who shared Vander Zalm's views would have their ire raised.

If a person found it amusing, that set the tone for how people would view it, as something not to be interpreted literally but as a message brought in a humorous way. Political cartoons, in particular, are not to be taken literally.

He said Munroe misdirected himself on the law by ruling that there were no facts before the readers because there had been editorials and cartoons before, and on the opposite page to the cartoon there was a critical column which included a flattering photograph of the minister.

The public had become used to cartoons involving gross exaggerations of Vander Zalm and when the public saw him depicted as pulling the wings off flies, the public would see that as a gross exaggeration and not meant literally.

Farquhar said anyone viewing the cartoon would automatically assume that it dealt with his actions as a minister and not his personal but his public conduct.

In effect, Munroe applied a literal interpretation to the cartoon. A reader would be more prepared to find allegory involved and not so quickly to apply a literal interpretation.

Farquhar also said Munroe applied the wrong legal test as to whether the cartoon was fair comment. He said the judge used the "ordinary person" test when he should have used the broader "fair man" or "honest man" test.

He said an English case held that fair comment must be given an extremely liberal interpretation and if the "ordinary person" test was allowed to stand, it would take the law back 200 years.

Farquhar also said the Court of Appeal can decide for itself, as in an appeal by way of a new trial, whether the cartoon reflects on Vander Zalm's personal character.

TOWN TALK

Premier Bill Bennett, it's said, is very much his own man but at times he sounds a lot like his late father, W.A.C. Bennett.

On Capital Comment, the premier teed off on newspapers suggesting that major papers encourage their reporters to write outrageous stories because they sell newspapers.

Even if a paper loses a libel suit, he said, "the press wins."

Mentioning his own successful suit some years ago against the Vancouver Sun, Bennett said "it's very hard for an ordinary individual to take on the big press with all its money".

"They (newspapers) can afford to be sued," Bennett said, "they've got insurance."

Anybody who was around when W.A.C. was preem can recall how he took a similar sort of tack. It was always "this little government" fighting against the big newspapers who were always agin Social Credit.

Plus ca change, plue t'est la meme chose.

When the appeal opened Monday, there were 12 journalists on hand including former Vancouver Sun publisher Stuart Keate who was covering it for Saturday Night.

A three-man team from BCTV in Vancouver included an artist who drew sketches throughout the day.

Loretta Lettuce has packed her bags and headed south for the winter with her family, the B.C. Coast Vegetable Marketing Board tells us.

The board issued an account of an interview with this remarkable talking vegetable in which she states it's "just too cold and moist here" from October to March for her liking.

"I want to thank all British Columbians for making me so welcome in their homes all spring, summer and early fall," says Ms. Lettuce. "I enjoyed being a cool, crisp part of your summer diet."

Thanks, Loretta. Now maybe the board can do something about getting a few less desirable vegetables to leave the table, like Corky Cabbage, Bill Brussel Sprout and Ted Turnip.

Lucky Linda

The first Miss Victoria since 1974 was crowned Monday night before a crowd of 500 in The Empress ballroom.

Linda Jensen, a 21-year-old restaurant hostess, won the honors and will leave this weekend for Toronto and the Miss Canada pageant on Nov. 5.

Linda was crowned by Kim Firth, now of Vancouver, who was the 1974 winner.

Runners up for this year's contest were Kary Abbott, 23, and Jan Smith, 19.

Boater pays for 'error'

A Vancouver boat owner was fined $150 after being found guilty by Judge Fred Green in Victoria provincial court Monday of impeding the B.C. Ferries' Queen of Alberni near Active Pass on May 19.

The ferry ran aground Aug. 9 on Collinson Reef, close to where the May 19 incident took place, and will be out of service until early 1980.

Manuel Leal, 49, was charged with impeding a larger vessel in a narrow channel under the Collision Regulations of the Canada Shipping Act.

Two RCMP officers testified they were conducting a small vessels check in the Active Pass area and, at about 10:40 a.m., they saw the ferry heading towards Swartz Bay and heard one long blast and two series of five blasts each on the whistle. The five-blast whistles were a danger signal.

They also said the vessel slowed down before Leal's 6.5-metre cabin cruiser moved slowly out of the way.

After the guilty verdict, Crown counsel Martha McNeely said the maximum penalty of $500 should be levied because it was a serious offence. She said the ferry was carrying a large number of passengers and vehicles and there was danger to life.

Green said he would not view it as that serious an offence but would consider that Leal committed an error in judgment. Events since May 19, the judge added, points out the problems which could arise.

$150,000 for park on spit

A $150,000 provincial lottery grant will be used to upgrade facilities at Sidney Spit, Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis said Monday.

The money will be used to build five kilometres of trails and a group campground accommodating 60 persons.

An additional 30-metre section of float will be added to the wharf, and visitor service improved.

Work is expected to start early in November.

Meanwhile, the Sidney Island Committee plans to continue its campaign to have the entire island acquired for park use.

Pam Jones, secretary, said the committee is receiving encouraging support from citizen groups, plus the B.C. chapter of the National and Provincial Parks Association, the B.C. Wildlife Federation and the B.C. Federation of Naturalists.

City hits again on back taxes

The city of Victoria is suing another property owner for payment of back taxes and plans to apply in court to have two other properties sold to have the taxes paid.

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers filed suit in B.C. Supreme Ccourt last week against businessman Jack Lacterman for $18,365.83 in taxes and penalties on property he owns at 762 Yates.

Two weeks ago the city took seven developers and property owners to court for payment of 1979 taxes totalling more than $300,000.

De Villiers also said he had obtained a judgment in court for the largest amount owing, $79,685.13 against Fort Victoria Properties Ltd., and will soon be applying for a court order to have its holdings — Market Square shopping centre downtown — sold to pay this amount.

Abacus Cities Ltd., the national property development company which went into receivership earlier this year, is also involved. It is the owner of Fort Victoria Properties, which is the firm Sam Bawlf set up in 1969 to carry out his renovation projects in the city. When he became an MLA in 1975 he sold to the Alberta-based conglomerate.

Abacus is also being sued separately by the city for payment of $67,886.85 in taxes on other property it owns in Victoria.

The other companies the city is suing are Concord Credit Ltd. for $50,883.75; Ponteix Properties Ltd. for $45,354.23; Victoria Park Place Ltd. for $27,273.21; Vista Homes Ltd. for $25,199.44 and Roanne Properties Ltd. for $25,221.69.

The Birdman: like his flock free at last

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Possibly the attraction was that they were free and he wasn't. But Frank Schlosser had a way with birds.

So much so that he became known as the Birdman of William Head federal prison.

It wasn't that Frank knew a lot about birds. He wasn't like another famous convict at Alcatraz.

But for six years, while serving a life sentence as a habitual criminal, he looked after a colony of swans and geese and ducks and other stray birds that frequented a small bay on William Head spit.

Each day the birds flocked around him as he fed them crusts of bread and other scraps he'd culled from the prison kitchen.

Three years ago his devotion to the birds gained publicity. An appeal was made for seeds, and the response was gratifying.

Frank, 69, the oldest inmate in the prison, held a special place in the eyes of staff and his fellow convicts.

Director Arlie Bender said Schlosser, whose record of thefts, false pretences and frauds stretched back more than 35 years, belonged to the old school of criminals.

"He was one of the last of the old-timers," Bender said.

"They gave crime a certain class. It was their trade, their occupation, and they were proud of it."

Like all old-timers, Frank accepted his punishment stoically.

He never created any trouble, any problems, except perhaps in the spring of 1978 when he went AWOL while on a temporary pass in Victoria.

With no one to care for them, the birds departed.

Schlosser was recaptured four months later. Two days before he was brought back to William Head the birds inexplicably returned and were waiting for him when he arrived.

This summer the parole board decided to transfer Schlosser to the minimum security correction centre on Pandora.

It was, in a sense, his ticket to freedom.

On Oct. 9 Frank's big day came.

He'd just settled in at Pandora when, the next day, he was stricken with a heart attack.

On Friday, Frank died in Victoria General Hospital.

A memorial service will be held Wednesday morning at Sands, 1803 Quadra.

In the afternoon, convicts and staff will gather in the prison chapel for a tribute to Frank, the friend of birds who longed to be free.

"Slim chance' for inventors

TORONTO (CP) — An inventor's chances of succeeding with a product are mighty slim these days, says the president of Canadian Patents and Development Ltd.

W. M. Hill said only one out of every 200 ideas results in a patent and one out of 600 patents earns enough to recoup the cost of the patent.

One out of 1,800 patents makes a minor profit, one out of 6,000 earns $10,000 and one in 60,000 earns more than $100,000 he told an inventors seminar during the weekend.

Lewin Bailey, former vice-president of Moore Corp. Ltd., said there still is room for independent inventors and other such businessmen but they must move with the times.

Bailey said entrepreneurs must become involved in demographics and economic projections to understand where the market will grow.

Innovators must recognize the size of the Canadian market is a handicap but proper economic information can open up limitless markets around the world.

A. H. Wilson of the National Research Council of Canada said even established businessmen should seek innovative practices to improve their operations.

"Innovation is a tool; it is not an end in itself."

Builders' lobby has new chief

OTTAWA (CP) — A 52-year-old Ottawa businessman has been appointed to a five-year term as president of the Canadian Construction Association, chairman Ian MacInnes announced today.

Robert Nuth, now general manager of the Construction Association of Montreal and the Province of Quebec, takes over as chief spokesman for the Ottawa-based lobby group in late January, MacInnes said in a news release.

The former president, Henry de Puyjalon, resigned recently because of poor health.

GET FOUR OF NINE NOMINATIONS...

...FOR OUSTANDING CFL PLAYER

Defenders grab the voting spotlight

MONTREAL (CP) — For one of the few times in Canadian Football League history defensive players have grabbed the spotlight in first-round balloting for the Schenley Awards.

Four of the nine nominees in the outstanding-player category announced Monday are members of the defensive corps, the most ever nominated in the annual vote conducted by 96 football reporters and broadcasters across Canada.

Second-round balloting, which will reduce the field to one nominee in each conference, begins this week and results will be announced Nov. 2. The eventual winners will be announced at the Schenley Awards presentation Nov.22, one of the highlights of Grey Cup week in Montreal.

Among those vying to become the first defensive player to win the outstanding player award are safety Ken McEachern of Saskatchewan Roughriders, defensive end Ed McElaney of Calgary Stampeders, defensive tackle John Helton of Winnipeg Blue Bombers and cornerback Mike Nelms of Ottawa Rough Riders.

McEachern, one of the few bright spots in a bleak season for Saskatchewan, also received nominations in the top Canadian category as well as for defensive player of the year.

The defensive stalwarts, however, will have to beat out running backs David Green of Montreal Alouettes, Terry Metcalfe of Toronto Argonauts and John Henry White of British Columbia Lions, quarterback Tom Clements of Hamilton Tiger Cats and receiver Waddell Smith of Edmonton Eskimos.

All but Clements, who was a nominee while with Ottawa in 1976, and Helton, selected as a member of the Stampeders in 1974, received the outstanding player nomination for the first time.

There are a trio of familiar faces, meanwhile, in the nominations for the outstanding Canadian award.

Tight end Tony Gabriel of Ottawa, last season's outstanding player, is seeking his fifth top Canadian award in six years, while tackle Dave Fennell of the Eskimos received his fourth straight nomination and Calgary receiver Tom Forzani earned the nod for the fourth time in five seasons.

Rounding out the list of top Canadian candidates in the Eastern Conference are Montreal guard Ray Watrin, slotback Leif Peterson of Hamilton and tight end Peter Muller of the Argonauts.

A pair of kickers — Bernie Ruoff of the Blue Bombers and Lui Passaglia of British Columbia — complete the Western Conference slate of contenders.

The candiates for the offensive lineman award are equally impressive as centre Al Wilson of the Lions, who won the award in 1977, goes up against tackles Curtis Webster of Saskatchewan, Lloyd Fairbanks of the Stampeders and Edmonton's Mike Wilson and centre John Bonk of Winnipeg.

In the East, Watrin will face competition from Larry Butler, Hamilton's nominee for the fourth straight year, tackle Nick Bastaja of the Argos and Ottawa guard Val Belcher.

Edmonton middle linebacker Dan Kepley, the 1977 winner, and Glen Jackson, who plays the same position for the Lions, will join Helton, McAleney and McEachern in a battle for the WFC defensive player nomination.

In the East, the struggle will be waged between Montreal cornerback Dickie Harris, defensive tackle Mike Raines of Ottawa, linebacker Ben Zambiasi of the Tiger-Cats and Bruce Smith, a defensive tackle with Toronto.

An influx of quality newcomers has left the rookie award up for grabs. Middle linebacker Tom Cousineau of the Alouettes is joined by Ottawa receiver Martin Cox and running backs Mike McArthur of the Argonauts and Jim Reid of Hamilton as EFC hopefuls.

The West will counter with Edmonton receiver Brian Kelly, quarterback Joe Paopao of the Lions, Calgary kicker Mike McTague, guard Neil Quilter of Saskatchewan and receiver Walt Passaglia of the Blue Bombers.

The real Steelers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Denver Broncos' timing was off. They met the wrong team at the wrong time.

"The real Pittsburgh Steelers showed up tonight," quarterback Terry Bradshaw said after the revitalized Super Bowl champions crushed Denver 42-7 Monday night in a National Football League game.

"They kicked our fannies," said Denver quarterback Craig Morton. "We got humiliated."

The week before, the Steelers fumbled nine times in a 34-10 loss in Cincinnati. It was the worst Pittsburgh defeat in nine seasons, dating back to a 29-3 loss to Houston in 1971.

But Bradshaw passed for 267 yards and two touchdowns agsinst Denver, and Franco Harris rushed for 121 yards and two more scores as the Steelers dealt the Broncos their worst loss since 1968, when they were thumped 43-7 by Oakland.

"That's the Steeler team I know," said Pittsburgh coach Chuck Noll. "We were better in all departments. I think to a man we had everyone functioning the way we have to for us to win in this league."

The Steelers had been limited in practice in previous weeks by injuries. But last week, Noll had a virtual return to training camp, complete with conditioning runs and no-fumble drills.

It paid off as the Steelers climbed to 6-2 and into sole possession of firstplace in the AFC Central Division.

The Broncos, meanwhile, slipped to 5-3 and into second place behind San Diego in the AFC West. And Denver coach Red Miller was downright displeased.

"We were outplayed, outcoached and very embarrassed in front of a lot of people," Miller said.

"This was the worst, most humiliating defeat in the 30 years I've been associated with football. And I don't like it. I don't know how anybody could stomach that and live with themselves."

By halftime, the Steelers held a 28-7 lead.

In the first quarter, a 56-yard run by Harris set up an 11-yard touchdown toss from Bradshaw to Lynn Swann.

In the second quarter, Bradshaw's passing set up a pair of short touchdown runs by Harris and another by Sidney Thornton.

Bradshaw, who hit 18 of 24 passes, added a 17-yard scoring pass in the final quarter to Thornton. And Steeler rookie Anthony Anderson bolted 10 yards for his first pro touchdown with 26 seconds left.

Denver managed its only touchdown in the first quarter on a 64-yard pass play from Morton to Haven Moses.

Leo Derman relaxes in office as retirement time nears

Good time to appreciate golf's long-time servant

Over the years, the ballroom at the Empress Hotel has been the setting for a variety of functions. Some good, some bad, some great, some not-so-great.

On Nov. 21, there is one more.

A good one. It's for "the Hawk."

Leo Derman retires as the secretary of Gorge Vale Golf Club at the end of the year. No one should be surprised to learn that the Gorge gang is setting up a proper farewell.

The clubhouse at the corner of Tillicum and Craigflower would have been the logical choice for a party. However, Leo Derman does not "belong" exclusively to Gorge Vale. The fact has been recognized by the golf club's executive, and the ballroom, around for a few more years than Leo, has been set aside to honor a man who has been an integral part of district golf for more than 50 years.

Officially, Nov. 21 will be "Leo Derman Appreciation Night."

It will be a night golfers from all clubs, and not just the Gorge, get a chance to thank a man who has given his all to golf.

★ ★ ★

"If it hadn't been for Leo," says Harry Young, who himself provided 18 outstanding years of leadership in the Victoria District Golf Committee, "Victoria would never have gotten the Commonwealth matches and the Canadian Amateur."

Young recalled that in 1956, exactly 12 years before the two big golf events came here, it was Derman who proposed Victoria bid for the Commonwealth matches and the Canadian Amateur. One to follow the other, thereby attracting a powerful international field to the Amateur.

Leo, as District secretary, was ordered to draft up an application and send it to Jim Anglin, then president of the Royal Canadian Golf Association. Anglin was impressed with Victoria's presentation and replied that, yes, Victoria should definitely be considered first for the Commonwealth matches, if and when Canada's turn came up.

Eight years later, in Australia, Albert Roland of Montreal, then the RCGA president, was informed the Commonwealth committee's desire to see the tournament in Canada. Roland accepted on behalf of the RCGA and expected his club, Royal Montreal, would host the matches.

Young, then a member of the RCGA board of governors, begged his pardon. Victoria, he informed the board, had applied for the event eight years earlier.

"Leo had Anglin's letter on file, dug it up and presented it to the RCGA. Because we had the letter, the RCGA stuck to its guns and awarded the tournaments to Victoria."

The double-barrelled offering came to Victoria in 1968 and both tournaments still rank as among the finest ever staged in Canada.

★ ★ ★

When Leo retires at the end of the year, he will fall three months short of the 30-year level of service to Gorge Vale. He started in March of 1950.

A former club captain as well as club champion (in 1948), Derman doesn't consider himself "a great golfer" but today has great pride in one victory. In 1935 he defeated Pat Fletcher to win the district caddy championship. Fletcher went on to win the Canadian Open, the last Canadian to do so, and Derman proudly points out that "not too many guys around here have beaten a Canadian Open champion."

He considers Bob Fleming, who no longer golfs competitively, as "the finest swinger" ever developed in Victoria but feels Jim Rutledge, 20-year-old winner of the B.C. Open this year, has the potential to go farther than anyone."

★ ★ ★

Derman has tremendous recall. No one, in golf around here, knows or remembers events of the past better than Leo.

His dedication to the sport is recognized at each and every annual general meeting of the District Committee. Derman's return as secretary has not been challenged for 27 years. It's always unanimous but preceded, in recent years, by a flood of good-natured ribbing.

Derman's service to the District Committee will continue for a 29th year. It was proposed at a recent meeting to form a new position — a tournament director who will be responsible for the operation of all district events.

The nomination will be made at the annual general meeting early in the New Year. The District Committee has only one man in mind. Don't spread it around, but his initials are L.D.

Your guess is correct because the District Committee isn't about to spring the dedicated Hawk loose.

Moscow wants to get kids out of town for Olympics

MOSCOW (AP) — Moscow city authorities are urging children — and many adults — to make early plans to leave the city during the 1980 Olympic Games.

Officials of the ministry of education and the Olympic Organizing Committee said Monday that efforts are under way to reduce Moscow's population during the Games, during which some 220,000 Soviet and foreign tourists will be in the capital each day.

Appeals distributed at Moscow elementary schools have urged parents to send their children during July and August to visit relatives in other cities or to the capital's extensive network of "pioneer camps" for children.

The camps, which charge low prices for their services, are subsidized by trade unions and handled more than 600,000 Moscow children last year.

"Of course, there can be no compulsion in this matter," an education ministry official said. "This is not an order, just a suggestion to parents." There are about a million elementary school age children in Moscow, a city of eight million residents.

Officials said trade unions and other tourist organizations also are organizing a large number of trips outside the city for Moscow adults this summer at bargain rates. They said the goal is to reduce strains on Moscow municipal services.

Final examinations also have been moved forward at several Moscow institutes for older youths to complete the academic year by May.

Soviet officials privately have expressed irritation at children who besiege foreign tourists with appeals for chewing gum or to exchange lapel pins, and at the alleged spreading of "ideological propaganda" by foreign visitors to impressionable Soviets.

Officials said, however, that the main reason to get children out of the city is fear they would get underfoot during the huge Olympic operation or that the influx of visitors could affect their health.

African body organizing to bar Britain from Games

YAOUNDE, Cameroun (Reuter) — The Supreme Council for Sport in Africa said Monday it was canvassing to have Britain excluded from next year's Moscow Olympic Games if she intends intensifying her sporting links with South Africa.

In a statement issued by the council, its president, Abraham Ordia of Nigeria, accused the British prime minister, Margaret Thatcher, of lacking moral courage to take every practical step to stop "the current tour of Britain by the racially-selected Barbarian rugby team of South Africa."

In a reference to a planned tour of South Africa next year by a British rugby team, the council said it would be "the last straw that breaks the camel's back and British rugby must then bear full responsibility for the consequences that will follow their action."

"Britain's continued fraternization with apartheid sport will be a major item on the agenca of the SCSA congress here in December," the council said.

In an apparent reference to next year's planned rugby tour of South Africa, the statement went on: "The SCSA is now canvassing all Asian, Caribbean and socialist countries for their support to exclude Britain from the Olympics if she intends intensifying her sporting links with apartheid South Africa."

Paperwork problems may put Garth in goal

Garth Astles may find himself in the hot seat tonight because Seattle Breakers want to avoid some paperwork.

A goaltender with Kelowna Buckaroos, Seattle's affiliate in the British Columbia Junior Hockey League, Astles "probably" will start in goal tonight when the Breakers visit Memorial Arena for their Western League date with the hot Victoria Cougars.

Regular netminder Ken Hodge was outstanding Saturday in Seattle's 3-2 loss to second-place Portland but the reports on Astles "have been good" and Breaker coach Monty Miron wants to see the farmhand in action.

Astles, a native of Edmonton, will fly from Kelowna to Victoria for tonight's game. It's not because Miron figures the undefeated Cougars will put Astles through a good test, but because Victoria happens to be convenient.

"It's just as easy for us to look at him in Victoria rather than get involved with the hassle of filling out forms at the border," explained Seattle manager Bill Moores.

Of greater concern than goaltending is the health of Seattle defenceman Tom Marsh. Heading into his third season, the stocky rearguard suffered a hip pointer in a game at Portland last week and is a doubtful starter.

Williams selected

NEW YORK (AP) — Seasoned Dick Williams, who led Montreal Expos to their best baseball year since their formation 11 years ago, has been named National League manager-of-the-year for 1979 in an Associated Press poll.

It is the second such award for Williams, who was selected as the top American League pilot after winning a division title with the Oakland A's in 1971.

Williams won the NL award in a relatively close battle with Houston's Bill Virdon, who had the Astros in the thick of their pennant race until the last few days of the season.

A country-wide panel of sports writers and broadcasters gave Williams 113 votes to 95 for Virdon. John McNamara of Cincinnati was third with 32.

Jazz posts first

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Bernard King sank a driving five-footer with 12 seconds remaining Monday night to give Utah Jazz its first ever National Basketball Association win, a 110-109 victory over the San Diego Clippers.

King's winning basket came on the heels of a jumper by Clippers' Freeman Williams just 15 seconds earlier as the teams traded the lead in the final two minutes of play.

Pete Maravich, with 28 points, led the Jazz to its first victory since moving to Utah from New Orleans last spring.

Oriole sale approved

NEW YORK (AP) — American League baseball owners formally approved the sale Monday of Baltimore Orioles to Edward Bennett Williams from Jerold Hoffberger for a reported $12 million.

Williams, who also owns part of the National Football League's Washington Redskins and serves as president of that franchise, won quick, unanimous certification for the sale from the 14 AL clubs. He will take control of the team on Nov. 1.

Because of Williams's Washington roots, there has been speculation he would either relocate the Orioles to the nation's capital or at least have the team play a portion of its home games there, but there was no discussion of either idea at the owners' meeting.

Weather cloudy, track slow

Post parade 1:00 p.m.

1 Claiming ($2,000). Purse $1500. 3-year-olds and up. 6½ FURLONGS

1-4	Fielder Frank (J. Mena)	123 2
64-1	Local Boy (Hoverson)	120 4
107-1	Copper Monarch (Owen)	115 5
2-3	Sure Murt (K. Head)	120 1
104-2	Sassie Driver (Wolski)	120 6
3-1	Austin Tayshush (Frazier	120 3
——	Hecan Orbit (J. Keating)	110 7
107-1	Nicola Captain (Watson)	115 8

Fielder Frank should benefit from first out and may last with these. Local Boy runs well fresh and would be no shocker if popped down in front. Copper Monarch would only need return to best to score. Sure Murt just missed in last.

2 Claiming $4,000. Purse $1,500. Maiden 3-year-olds. 6½ FURLONGS

108-1	Classic Craig (Walker)	117 6

Also eligible:

——	Prime Time Miss (K. Head)	119
108-1	Bold Purchase (Smith)	122

Classic Craig has been testing better than these and could make it home today. Sonoita Doll often close; better than most here and might get job done. Our Soldier has rail and speed to utilize it.

3 Claiming ($2,500). Purse $1,500. 3-year-old fillies and mares. 6½ FURLONGS

104-4	Wish Me A Rainbow (Frazier)	116 6
(2-4)	Julie's Must (K. Head)	108 5
——	Criminy Mary (A. Smith)	116 1
2-4	Vixen Lass (Walker)	116 2
2-4	Sherry's Serina (J. Mena)	116 3
2-5	Room For One (Hoverson)	114 4
2-4	Fircrest Sue (Mi Mena)	117 7

Wish Me A Rainbow has speed and may have dropped into likely spot. Julies Must comes right back against same kind and could repeat. Criminy Mary, off record on prairies, should improve off debut.

4 Claiming ($2,000). Purse $1,500. 3- and 4-year-old fillies. 6½ FURLONGS

(1-5)	Bonnie Lois (Carter)	120 2
1-7	Increased Earnings (J. Mena)	117 7
3-2	Star Lodge (K. Head)	117 5
2-4	Lady Selena	120 1
101-1	Pens Choice	115 3
92-1	Shannon Sea (Wolksi)	110 4
105-5	Langley's Sanya (M. Mena)	117 6

Bonnie Lois showed determination in winning debut and same effort would be enough here. Increased Earnings seems to prefer a fast strip and may get it. Star Lodge has a closing rally and could take to track.

5 Claiming ($4,000). Purse $1,500 3- and 4-year-olds. 6½ FURLONGS

(2-6)	Commander Jim (Carter)	115 3
(1-2)	Mr. Giff (J. Mena)	118 6
3-6	High And Outside (Walker)	112 5
2-6	Fast Gambler (Hoverson)	120 1
108-13	My Mom's Magic (Cowan)	114 2
1-7	Charm Bracelet (Wilkinson)	117 4
106-10	Intrepid Blaze (Tompkins)	120 7
(102-1)	Duffus Castle (A. Smith)	115 8

Commander Jim came storming from behind against similar in first; no reason can't repeat. Mr. Giff moves up off score and will have to be caught in lane. High and Outside would prefer a fast strip; if gets it, might be hard to overhaul.

6 Claiming ($2,500). Purse $1,500 3-year-olds and up. ONE MILE

2-6	Vicalino (Wilkinson)	120 6
(1-6)	Hayden's Choice (Mlsn)	116 4
2-5	Triple Two (Frazier)	118 5
(3-2)	Second Command	116 1
2-5	Risk 'n' Hope (K. Head)	114 2
1-8	Fly Bumps (Carter)	121 3
——	Tenusa (Tompkins)	114 7
2-2	Ala D.J (Watson)	115 8

Vicalino should find these easier; if gets to set own pace is one to beat. Haydn's Choice won first easily and will be charging in lane again. Triple Two may find this distance more to liking, beware.

7 Claiming ($8,000). Purse $1,700. 3- and 4-year-olds. 6½ FURLONGS

(108-17)	Fleet Navaho (A. Smith)	120 1
91-7	Parkhead Prince (Wolski)	115 3
(3-9)	True Multi (Wilkinson)	112 6
108-16	Sly Gesture (M. Walker)	114 2
104-5	Zac Zac	115 4
108-16	Quiet Reflection (Hvsn)	114 5

Fleet Navaho, sharp now, must be beaten for all of it. Parkhead Prince is capable of surprise but will need best effort. True Multi can't be faulted for debut here and should share brackets.

8 Claiming ($2,000). Purse $1,500. 3-year-olds and up. 6½ FURLONGS

1-8	Major Erroch (Smith)	120 3
1-6	One Night Stand II (Carter)	123 4
1-6	Chechako (J. Mena)	120 6
3-2	Tuff To Bluff (K. Head)	120 1
1-8	Captain Cognac (Wolski)	120 2
3-2	Perbaai (Melanson)	120 5
3-2	Royal Truce (Frazier)	120 7

Major Erroch ran evenly in first start and slight improvement could be enough to score. One Night Stand II just missed in previous and might nail leaders in lane. Chechako will force the early pace; may hang on for part.

Successful city trainer unhappy with weather

By BILL WALKER

Bill Olson is a trainer of thoroughbreds, a good one, and one of the very good reasons why Victoria horse lovers don't want to lose thoroughbred horse racing on the Island.

Going into Monday's fourth day of the Capital City Turf Club's 16-day meeting at Sandown Park, the Olson family had a record that would be envied by any trainer.

Horses trained by Olson and his daughter Cindy had been in the money in eight of the nine races in which they had been entered, which isn't bad; and, on Monday the Olson family picked up a third and a fourth in three tries to keep up the good work and the money coming in.

This was accomplished by a third with Ardorin's Hustler, trained by Cindy, in the fifth, and Blaven, which was fourth, in the seventh. The Aryan ran down the line in the eighth.

All of which makes the Olson record for four days read like this:

Two wins, two seconds, four thirds and two fourths in 11 tries.

Which is great. But as Olson, who has been in the horse business for 24 years, puts it, it is the future he is worried about.

"It's disheartening, to come back to Sandown and have weather like this, after such a fine summer," he said.

"Because we just have to make thoroughbred racing go here on the Island for the local owners and trainers and the Capital City Turf Club.

"We started it all here and we don't want to play second fiddle to anyone, and that means the trotters.

"If off-track betting comes in — and it looks like it will — we could have a half-million dollar handle here. So why give up now?"

Olson's first two wins of the Sandown season came with The Aryan on opening day and Lord Hubert in the Colonist Handicap Saturday. (Lord Hubert, incidentally, was ridden by Joel Mena and not Travis Wilkinson as originally announced).

Olson has 16 horses here, probably the next best to Lord Hubert, which he is handling for Margaret Ellis and owner Joe Wonnacott, being Andy's Star which runs in the $12,500 claiming category.

Andy's Star has won $13,000 for Olson this year.

One of the best he ever had is That's The Key, a six year old which had to be put down this year.

Another of his personal favorites is Big Midget, while one for the future might be Style Gold, a two-year old bay gelding with promise.

The racing end of it started for Olson when a trainer, Johnny Allen, some years ago casually remarked: "If you want a horse, I'll get one for you."

"I said okay, but didn't think much about it." Olson said.

"But the next thing I knew Allen called me and said 'I've found you a horse.' "

"But I've got no money," I told him.

"It's only $400," he answered.

"So I went to Household Finance and borrowed the money," Olson continued.

"And my new mare was Doree Dee."

"Well, Doree Dee was just what I needed. She finished second twice and third twice in her first four races. Suddenly I had enough money to pay off Household Finance — I don't think they liked it, getting their money back that quickly — and naturally, I was hooked.

"Doree Dee went on to win $15,000. That's what gave us the bug, I tried once to quit and gave it up for about six months. But I couldn't stay away. And now the whole family is involved."

Then Olson was gone. It was time for the fifth and Ardorins Hustler's appearance.

Olson is typical of the Island owners. This is their life. The racing and the horses they can handle, the weather, they can't; and they need a Sandown meet to make it all go.

And the weather Monday was poor to start with, got progressively worse during the eight-race card, and Olson didn't have any winners.

But John Timpany and Len Lucas did. They each saddled two. Timpany got his with the former handicapper, Color Me Bold, in the seventh, which returned $8.10 and combined with Diving Girl for an Exactor of $43.50, and Screen Star ($9.00) in the first. Both were ridden by jockey Garth Carter.

Lucas, the leading trainer with five, saddled Down Town Cat ($15.20) in the third and Low Nickers ($5.10) in the fourth.

The crowd was 1,276 and the handle $86,286. Racing resumes Wednesday with post parade at 1 p.m. Form chart on page 15.

Athletics trip Trilec

Victoria Athletics drew first blood, edging newcomer Trilec Seniors 65-64 Monday in the season-opener of the expanded Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League at Central Junior High School.

Tom Holmes led the Athletic attack with 18 points, including 12 in the second half, and clubmate Jim MacKay added 16.

Mark Higgins, Ken Wiens and Darrel Johnson each pumped in 12 points for Trilec.

The league has doubled in size from four to eight teams this season.

Holdover squads are Trilec Juniors, Ivys and Athletics while Trilec Seniors, Henderson Realty, Junior Men, Cuckoo Clock and DataTech are new entries in the league.

Snelling back at swim helm

OTTAWA (CP) — Deryk Snelling, having sat out a two-year suspension for conducting coaching clinics in South Africa, will be the head coach of Canada's Olympic team at next summer's Games in Moscow.

The Canadian Amateur Swimming Association announced the Snelling appointment Monday following a selection meeting in Montreal last weekend.

Now head coach at the Etobicoke Swim Club in Toronto, Snelling was head of the Olympic swimming teams in 1972 and 1976. But in 1977 he was suspended from international competitions for two years by FINA, the world governing body of swimming, for conducting coaching clinics during a visit to South Africa.

FINA is opposed to the apartheid (racial separation) policies of the South African government and has forbidden competitions or contacts with athletes from that country.

The Snelling suspension expired Sept. 30 and the Australian-born coach now will be able to concentrate on making sure Canadian swimmers at least hold on to their No. 3 ranking in the world.

Roughriders study cable TV

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders, facing a tightening financial outlook along with their dismal playing record, are considering closed circuit television for their home games, Gord Staseson, club president, says.

"We have to look at every avenue to get more money for the team and if closed circuit cable TV in your living room is the solution, then we'd be foolish not to pursue it," he said in an interview.

The Canadian Football League team has won only one of its 14 regular season games this year and has had trouble drawing fans to Taylor Field. The stadium was expanded by 5,000 seats and artificial turf laid on it for this season.

"What we were really frightened about the last time we looked at the idea was that we'd have an empty ball park and all the fans would be at home watching the game."

He said as many as 4,000 fans drive from as far away as Prince Albert to watch the team play.

Five-victory efforts by two Olympians

DUNCAN — Stan Davis and Shelley Cuppage led a strong showing by members of Victoria Olympians by posting five victories each in the first Vancouver Island regional swim meet of the season Sunday at Cowichan Valley Recreation Centre.

Davis won the 50 metre freestyle, 400 individual medley, 100 breaststroke, 200 freestyle and 100 butterfly events while Cuppage chalked up first place finishes in the 400 freestyle, 200 individual medley, 100 freestyle, 100 backstroke and 200 butterfly events.

Neil McKinley of Olympians won four other age-class events — 100 and 400 freestyle, 200 breaststroke and 200 individual medley — while clubmate Wayne Kelly chalked up firsts in the 100 butterfly, 400 individual medley and 200 freestyle.

Simon Bicknell of the Victoria "Y" won six events — 100 breaststroke, 50 butterfly, 50 freestyle, 200 freestyle, 50 backstroke and 200 individual medley — while clubmate Boyd Grealy won the 200 individual medley, 100 backstroke, 100 butterfly and 100 breaststroke in another age group.

Another multiple winner was Kelly Twordik of Juan de Fuca Cohos, who earned victories in the 100 freestyle, 100 backstroke and 200 individual medley.

Legion snaps losing skein

Kelly Bryant, Dan Scott and Mark Grier fired two goals apiece to lead Esquimalt Legion to a 7-4 win over Juan de Fuca Gulls in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game Monday night at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Esquimalt took period leads of 3-0 and 5-3 en route to its first win of the season.

John Russell scored the other Esquimalt goal while Guy Moran, Ross Anderson, Dave Holmwood and Barry Girbav counted for Gulls.

MacKenzie rink takes top event

Barb MacKenzie of the host club won "A" event laurels with an extra-end victory over clubmate Helen Edwards during finals of the 46-rink Labatt's mixed bonspiel Sunday at Victoria Curling Club.

Joy Hoole of Juan de Fuca captured "B" event honors, Barb Odeh of the Racquet Club topped the "C" event and Shirley Gray of the host club won the "D" event.

Results:

Merchants clip Blades

DUNCAN — Juan de Fuca Merchants posted their third straight victory by defeating Duncan Blades 7-5 in a South Island Big Six Hockey League game at Cowichan Valley Recreation Centre.

The game was deadlocked 2-2 after the first period and Merchants took a 3-2 lead going into the final frame.

Al Goldade set the pace for Juan de Fuca with three goals while Barry McLachlan added two and singles were contributed by Dan Walushka and Steve Barrie.

Doug Lafleur, Dave Dines, Earl Morris, Terry Gibson and Ted Grant replied for Blades.

WRITERS' PRESIDENT

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Phil Collier of San Diego has been elected president of the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Johnson top boxer

CAMPBELL RIVER — Tim Johnson of Victoria Junior Jaycees Boxing Club stopped Ron Miller of Campbell River with a technical knockout during the second round of their 165-pound class fight in an amateur boxing card here at the weekend.

Johnson was later selected as the top boxer of the card.

Perry Evans of the Victoria club also claimed a victory, defeating Steve Wood of Campbell River by a unanimous decision in the 147-pound category.

Two other Victorians suffered defeats. Robbie Cousins lost a split decision to Jim Fiddler of Campbell River in the 156-pound class and Paul Deluca was disqualified in the 80-pound fight against Tod Evans of Vancouver.

Sneekers step on Jayvees

Yeta Dilalla turned on her former school Sunday.

She scored 20 points as Sneekers, overcoming a 24-22 half-time deficit, defeated University of Victoria Jayvees 60-51 in Victoria Senior Women's Basketball League action at UVic.

Ellen Gains and Glynis McFerran each added 14 for Sneekers while Lisa Hebb (11), Shauna Tucker (10) and Wendy Hyer (10) carried the UVic offense.

Mini-rugby series slated

Oak Bay Wanderers are launching a mini-rugby program to boost interest among boys in the 10-12-year-old category.

Coaches and players from the Oak Bay club will provide instruction for all interested youngsters. The series, to be held on seven successive Saturdays starting Oct. 27, will be staged at Windsor Park.

Additional information may be obtained at the Wanderers' clubhouse, 1928 Oak Bay Avenue.

Wille leads cycle event

Peter Wille captured top honors in the expert class Sunday at the Victoria Motorcycle Club border trial.

Doug Moore topped the senior competition. Terry Anderson was second and Ray Little finished third.

Kelly Hunter captured the novice event with Robert Beecroft placing second, ahead of Dave Lamont.

Nineteen riders competed in the final trial of the season.

Racing career ends for all-time money-winner

Affirmed has 'done everything'

NEW YORK (AP) — Harbor View Farm's Affirmed, thoroughbred racing's all-time money-winner whose battles with Alydar were regarded among the greatest in history, has been retired, trainer Laz Barrera announced Monday.

"He has done everything, proven everything," said Barrera of racing's 11th Triple Crown winner. "We want him to leave racing the same way he came in, sound and perfect."

Barrera made the announcement at Aqueduct after consulting with the colt's owner, Louis Wolfson. It came somewhat of a surprise since the four-year-old son of Exclusive Native had been expected to run Saturday in the $250,000 Turf Classic at Aqueduct as perhaps his last race before going to stud.

Affirmed, who was syndicated for a then-record $14.4 million last year, will be shipped to Spendthrift Farm in Lexington, Ky., for stud duty Dec. 1.

Affirmed earned $2,393,818 in his career with 22 victories — 19 stakes — five seconds and one third in 29 starts. He finished out of the money once, in the 1978 Jockey Club Gold Cup, when his saddle slipped and he wound up fourth.

He avenged that defeat in this year's Jockey Club Gold Cup on Oct. 6 at Belmont Park when he scored by three-quarters of a length over Spectacular Bid, the 1979 Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner. The race was his last start and apparently wrapped up his second straight horse-of-the-year title.

But Affirmed will be remembered for his stirring battles with Calumet Farm's Alydar, a late-charger who finished second in all three Triple Crown races — the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes in 1978. The margins were 1½ lengths, a neck and a head.

They met 10 times as two and three-year-olds with Affirmed winning seven times. Alydar beat Affirmed twice as a two-year-old and once as a three-year-old in the Travers Stakes at Saratoga when Affirmed was diqualified to second from first.

"He did not like the grass," Barrera said, a day after giving Affirmed his first formal workout on the grass in preparation for the Turf Classic. "It would not be fair for the horse or the public for him to compete.

"He is the soundest horse I ever trained and the most intelligent, smarter than most humans."

Affirmed's victories this year came in the Charles Strub, Santa Anita Handicap, Californian, Hollywood Gold Cup, Woodward and Jockey Club Gold Cup.

Barrera was widely criticized when he didn't enter Affirmed in the Marlboro Cup at Belmont Park last month against Spectacular Bid because what he thought was too big a disparity in weights.

Williams trying to end Endako walkout

Labor Minister Allan Williams is attempting to end the Endako molybdenum mine strike, now more than eight months old, in north-central British Columbia.

Williams called company and union officials to a meeting this afternoon to try to break the impasse that threatens to continue through the winter.

The company and striking Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers are deadlocked on the size of a wage increase and the union demand for amnesty for 13 workers accused of picket-line violence.

The dispute has been marred by violence since the company has continued production with management and non-union personnel and has shipped high-priced molybdenum by truck through the picket lines.

Williams intervened after the company announced it would begin hiring workers to replace 125 of 490 union members who terminated their employment since the shutdown began Feb. 14.

Fire fighting tab hits $7M

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Fire-fighting in the Kamloops forest district this year has cost $7 million, four times more than the $1.7 million total a year ago.

Jack Bailey, regional manager for forest protection in the south-central Interior district, says over 60 per cent of the fires during this year's long, hot summer were caused by lightning. This compares with a 37-percent average over the last 10 years.

So far this year, 5,749 hectares of timber have burned as a result of 1,284 fires, compared with 1,450 hectares and 583 fires last year.

The high cost of fire-fighting this year results in part from lightning strikes in inaccessible areas, which require aircraft. Helicopters were used to carry crews, fire-fighting equipment and supplies to the area, Bailey said recently.

"We took extra precautions by hitting fires harder than you do if the fire hazard was in a low stage," he said. "Because of the long period of extreme-to-high fire hazard, every fire had the potential to become large."

The official fire season, which usually lasts in B.C. from April 15 to Oct. 15, has been extended to Oct. 31. Bailey said the current fire-danger level is low, however, because of recent rains.

The Kamloops district has had 34 per cent of the fires in the province this year. There have been 21,323 hectares burned throughout B.C. this year and total fire-fighting costs are $19 million.

Woman stabbed

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — Police here are treating the discovery of a body of a woman in about 12 metres of water off of Whytecliffe Park as a homicide.

A police spokesman said the woman died of stab wounds.

The body was found wrapped in chains early Sunday by two men diving near the park.

The police have appealed to the public for assistance in identifying the women. She is in her mid-20s, 5'5", weighs 115 pounds and has brown hair.

The woman was wearing two gold chains and two rings, one inscribed with the initials D-J.

Earnings up

Canadian Cellulose Ltd. of Vancouver had net earnings of $10.4 million or 86 cents a share for the first nine months of this year, up from $1.7 million or 14 cents in the same period last year.

A report Friday that earnings for the period were only $3.8 million or 31 cents a share were erroneous. The company had net earnings of $3.8 million in the third quarter alone.

Sales for the first nine months totalled $181.7 million, up from $128.9 million.

Third-quarter sales totalled $61 million, up from $39.9 million.

37 rail layoffs

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A decline of rail traffic on the Canadian National Railways line has led to layoff of 37 trainmen here.

A company spokesman in Edmonton said in a telephone interview that the seasonal decline has been greater this year than last due to the collapse of the railway bridge in Vancouver after it was rammed by a Japanese freighter last week.

Pilot identified

HOPE (CP) — RCMP identified the pilot whose body was found Monday in a downed Cessna 188 aircraft about 28 kilometres east of here as Peter John Chick, 40, of Clearbrook.

City firm to build navigation station

Dura Construction of Victoria has been awarded a $733,850 contract to build a navigation station at Port Hardy.

The Port Hardy station and its special equipment, which will cost $4 million, is a joint project of the U.S. and Canadian coast guards designed to improve the accuracy and strength of navigational signals along the B.C. coast.

Scheduled to go on the air next March, the Port Hardy station will be integrated into a chain, which consists of a master station at Williams Lake and secondary stations at Shoal Cove, Alaska, and George, Wash.

Vancouver Island mountains weaken the George station signal in Dixon entrance and Hecate Strait, as well as the Shoal Cove signal in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

A master signal and two secondary signals are necessary to obtain a navigational fix, so the new station at Port Hardy was deemed necessary.

The Canadian Coast Guard will supply $1.8 million for the site, building, power lines, access roads and installation of the antenna and electronic equipment, and $180,000 annually for operation and maintenance costs.

The U.S. Coast Guard will supply the $2.2 million antenna and electronic package.

Dura will construct the station building, access roads, water supply and anchors for the antenna tower, and will bury nearly 31 kilometres of cable.

Research parks 'partial answer' to nation's ills

By AB KENT

University of Victoria president Howard Petch believes campus research parks will help dispel the gloom of Canada's economic prospects.

He told a panel discussion at the Student Union Building Monday there are a lot of defects in the Canadian economy.

"I'm not confident it can be turned about."

The lack of research and development by Canadian corporations is only one facet of the problem which involves a lack of venture capital for domestic industry and domination by foreign corporations, Petch said.

"The tragedy is that unemployment is falling out on the young, and I think it will continue," he said.

In the past three or four years salaries have failed to keep up with inflation, so that the middle income earners are also suffering. The national economy is in bad shape and the provincial unemployment rate is about double the national average.

"Can we turn around the economy to provide jobs?" the president asked.

Students questioned the effectiveness of the provincial Discovery Parks program designed to encourage applied research at universities and the B.C. Institute of Technology, and Petch replied:

"The reason I support this — certainly it is not the whole answer — hopefully it's a partial answer to the state of the country."

The meeting included Don Larsen, an officer of B.C. Development Corp., who was asked if he could guarantee student employment at discovery parks.

Larsen said there was no way this could be done, but he cited experience elsewhere in which students are employed in large numbers.

PETCH
. . . 'discreet sites'

Petch also was asked how it could be guaranteed that corporations doing development research in discovery parks end up doing their manufacturing in B.C., or in Canada.

Petch said applied research and development would be aimed at solving particularly Canadian problems, unlike basic research whose use could be worldwide.

"It's one hell of an incentive to corporations" who are not in need of money or land, commented a student who noted the incentives offered to firms for setting up a facility on campus.

With the industrial base of the nation all located in Eastern Canada, "we're not going to attract anyone here without some kind of incentive," Larsen said.

The incentives were inconsistent with cutbacks in educational programs, a student said, objecting to the suggestion that two of the largest corporations, MacMillan Bloedel and B.C. Telephone Co., were getting involved.

He said it was great for people in the sciences. "But we're not a factory here. We're an institute of learning."

To the objection that the parks concept was sneaked through the legislature in a bill covering miscellaneous funds, Larsen said no special legislation was required to set up the Discovery Foundation or discovery parks. The initial funding is from $3 million in surplus government funds, not education funds.

He said it also is incorrect to suggest that the project was founded without consultation with the universities, and invited student views.

"We'll communicate with anyone who wants to listen to us," Larsen said.

While the two mainland universities and BCIT have considerable acreage to offer to the program (UBC has 50 acres available; BCIT 100), UVic, with a campus of less than 400 acres could not come up with the requested 20-acre minimum for buildings. Nor are there undeveloped lands adjoining.

Petch said lands put aside for future academic purposes to the year 2000 could not be disturbed and that therefore at UVic the discovery buildings may come about by in-filling in appropriate places.

Perhaps three buildings in discreet sites could be integrated with existing buildings, he said. Planners will be selective in trying to locate a discovery venture near the most closely related university facilities.

For example, he said the new life sciences building might include a wing or floor for discovery R&D like environmental toxicology in which a national laboratory is needed. UVic could be chosen in view of having received a strategic grant for toxicological studies.

Lung drive starts Nov. 1

The B.C. Lung Association will launch its annual Christmas seal campaign Nov. 1.

By the end of November, the association will have mailed 1,200,000 appeal letters to homes and businesses in the province.

Christmas seals have been used in Canada since 1903, with the proceeds originally used to fund tuberculosis research. With TB now beaten by "wonder drugs," the lung association has shifted its emphasis to such diseases as asthma, emphysema and chronic bronchitis.

In the last decade, lung associations everywhere have been prime movers in the development of of research and education projects concerned with air pollution and cigarette smoking, as well as ongoing research into the diseases caused by them.

Committee chairman for Victoria is Dr. Robert Lane of the Victoria and Island Chest Clinic.

Before the judge

Judge Harold Alder in provincial court Monday imposed fines totalling $600 on 19-year-old David Samuel Neiley, 735 Pandora.

Neiley changed his plea to guilty on charges of obstructing a peace officer and dangerous driving May 21.

Crown counsel Richard Law told the court Saanich police spotted two motorcyclists racing north on the Pat Bay Highway about 9:30 p.m. and began a 12-kilometre chase which reached speeds of 130 km/h in a 50-km/h zone.

Neiley's lawyer explained it was a spur-of-the-moment decision to race and that Neiley never knew the other motorcyclist. Neiley was also upset over a separation from his wife that week.

Alder imposed a $100 fine on the obstruction charge and a $500 fine on the dangerous driving. He also ordered Neiley not to operate a motor vehicle during a six-month probationary period.

An 18-year-old Nanaimo youth was given a 11-day, intermittent jail term for driving while under suspension.

Edwin George Stepa, 312 Mt. Benson, was driving a vehicle which was involved in an accident Sept. 13 at West Saanich Road and Elk Lake Drive about 3:45 a.m.

Law said Stepa had been convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 on Aug. 22, less than a month earlier, and had been suspended for six months.

Legal aid lawyer John Hills explained that Stepa was with some friends that evening and was being driven when he decided the friend was too drunk and took over the wheel.

Hills said Stepa was a Grade 12 student at Nanaimo District High School and was also a night foreman at the Goodwill Bottling plant in Nanaimo earning $850 a month.

"You've been very, very stupid," Alder commented before handing out the jail term. "You had everything going for you and you've blown it."

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: George Joseph Galllagher, 34, of 1578 Jasper Place, $400; and Leonard Paisley, 24, of Highland Road, $400.

In addition, Paisley was fined another $50 for failing to take reasonable efforts to notify an owner of property damage.

$97,352 paid to crime victims

VANCOUVER (CP) — Victims of crime in B.C. were paid a total of $97,352 in September under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act, the provincial Workers' Compensation Board announced today.

Forty-seven awards were made, with the largest amount, $7,325, paid to a 26-year-old Vancouver man who was stabbed twice when he tried to intervene in a scuffle between his assailant and another man.

The payment was made for loss of potential wages and his injuries.

Under the act, anyone who is a victim of crime in the province may apply for compensation.

Symphony hits stride with guest conductor

By AUDREY JOHNSON

With its second pair of 1979-80 concerts this week, Victoria Symphony Orchestra achieved a new level of competence under guest conductor Franz Paul Decker.

The orchestra has never sounded better.

Decker, obviously an artist to his coaxing fingertips, proved that this is an ensemble capable of performing in a thoroughly efficient and artistic manner.

Bearing this in mind, together with the acquisition of new dynamic resident musical director, Paul Freeman, audiences should properly expect nothing less in performance standard for the rest of the season.

Crowning the over-all satisfaction was the special interest and pleasure provided by the presence of extraordinarily gifted violin soloist Dylana Jenson.

This 18-year-old artist who has already successfully stormed some pretty formidible bastions, including the Moscow Tchaikowsky Competition, performed the too infrequently played Concerto in A minor Op.28, by Carl Goldmark.

The concerto is at least as attractive and showy as some of the more cliched works in the repertoire, and richer and more interesting in the orchestral part's balances and contrasts with the solo instrument.

Jenson is indeed a technical prodigy. She crested the many problem passages with dazzling fluency; the agility of bow and left hand complimented each other perfectly and her intonation was consistently pure.

Her bowing is pliant and musically adroit in pointing and shaping phrases. One of the special charms she possesses is her tone quality, which is delightfully clear, vibrant and smooth from top to bottom.

This, with her mature and comprehensive technique gives her playing a degree of authority that is quite awe-inspiring. Especially considering the years she has ahead in which to broaden and consolidate her virtuosic qualities and refine, elaborate and deepen her interpretive nature.

Decker opened the program with the brief spirited Scherzo for Strings by Harry Somers, a reading that, while it was firmly controlled, did not dim the wilful spirit but heightened it with a suggestion of gleeful capering.

Major work for Decker and the orchestra was Schubert's Symphony No.9 in C Major. The "Great" C Major was one of Schubert's last works and a direct indication of the scope of his genius and the heights he might have achieved.

Decker's concept of the symphony resulted in a performance which, apart from the orchestra's satisfactory role in the Goldmark, prompted the opening remarks in this review.

Crisp attack and close ensemble playing in the string section, an increase in poise and buoyancy among the winds, more uniform intonation; greater precision and subtlety in dynamic levels, marked the performance as a superior one.

Interpretively, as well as in its sharpened technical alertness, it acknowledged the presence on the podium of one of Canada's justly noted artist-conductors.

Redgrave's views 'wrong' for Holocaust role

By LEE MARGULIES
Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — CBS executives Monday met the Holocaust survivor whom Vanessa Redgrave is to portray in a three-hour television movie and refused her demand that the actress be removed from the role.

Fania Fenelon, accompanied by representatives of the Simon Wiesenthal Center for Holocaust Studies in Los Angeles, objected to the casting and to the script of Playing for Time, a dramatization of her book about her experiences as an inmate at the Auschwitz concentration camp from 1943-45. Fenelon was a member of the women's orchestra that was required to play music while other prisoners were marched to the gas chambers.

The project, scheduled to begin filming next month, has been the subject of controversy since last summer, when several Jewish organizations protested the casting of Redgrave, who has expressed support for the anti-Israeli Palestine Liberation Organization.

"It is not her political views that are in question," Fenelon said. "It is that she is not me. She is a fanatic. I am not a fanatic.

Fenelon, Hier and Cooper conferred for about 75 minutes at the CBS headquarters with Gene Jankowski, president of thne CBS Broadcast Group, and Gene Mater, vice president and assistant to Jankowski.

Mater said afterward, "We assured them that we had no intention of desecrating the memory of the Holocaust victims or offending anyone or generating publicity, but that we could not and would not remove Miss Redgrave."

At issue now, Mater said, is whether a performer's political or personal views should be considered in their selection for a role and whether any individual or group could veto a broadcaster's decision.

At the news conference, however, Hier contended that "what they (CBS) are really saying is that there's a concern for the rights of Vanessa Redgrave, but they have no answer when asked, 'Who speaks for Fania? Who speaks for the 11 million victims and the survivors?' "

Opening lead — two of diamonds.

You can't expect the enemy to fall into a trap every time you give them a chance to make a mistake, but it stands to reason that the more such opportunities they get the more often they will oblige.

Consider this case where it would be easy for East to go wrong on defense. West leads his fourth best diamond, declarer winning the trick in dummy and returning a spade. East's proper play is a low spade, not the ace, but the fact is that many players holding East's cards could not bring themselves to follow low on dummy's singleton spade.

First, let's see what happens if East goes up with the ace. South wins the diamond return, cashes the king of spades, discarding a diamond from dummy, plays a trump and easily makes four. He loses a spade, a trump and a club — period.

Next, let's see what happens if East plays low on the spade. South can make the contract if he is smart enough to play the king, but odds favor his playing the jack.

Declarer is likely to assume, once East follows low, that West has the ace, and he may therefore play the jack in the hope of finding East with the queen. If he does, South would later go down against proper defense, losing a trick in each suit.

The point is that East, who knows from the deuce of diamonds lead that declarer has precisely three diamonds — and hence a diamond loser — cannot lose a blessed thing by playing low on the spade. He gives declarer a chance to make a mistake and hopes that South will go wrong.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, October 24 by SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on communication, spiritual insight, being true to yourself, planning for journey, educational project, advertising or publishing program. You get glimpse behind scenes. Aura of romance, glamour is present.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Get beneath layers of pretense—get true picture concerning leases, ownership, taxes, financial structure affecting partner, mate. Capricorn, Cancer natives figure prominently. Nothing is halfway—if playing games, you will lose. If dedicated, sincere, you hit jackpot!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Finish project, plug loopholes, coordinate efforts with one close to you, including partner or mate. Aries, Libra persons figure in scenario. By making reasonable concessions, you eventually enjoy significant advance. Act accordingly!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emphasis on new contacts, getting to heart of matters, expressing yourself in original way. Leo, Aquarius persons are in picture. You gain valuable information concerning basics of job and security. You can be revitalized!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Gentle approach to one who means much to you is now a requisite. Message will become crystal-clear. Accent on creative urge and outlet, speculation, taking a chance on hunches, feelings. You have reason for new hope, optimism!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Someone, perhaps resentful and envious, makes serious attempt to get you off right track. Be prepared; protect self in "clinches." Be versatile without scattering forces. Insist on answers to inquiries, not "tall tales."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your ideas can be transformed into viable concepts. You receive verification, a green light—you will have necessary support. Relative aids in making important contact. You'll have a chance to be more flexible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You receive news which could add up to money in bank. Accent on valuables, personal possessions, income potential. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. You style, methods gain plaudits and cash.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Highlight daring, pioneering, initiative—but be gentle in handling affairs in domestic area. Genuine bargain is available, especially where home repairs, purchases are concerned. Timing is on target. You receive "token of affection."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What appears on surface may not be "real." Remember dictum, "All that glitters is not gold." Check statements, accounts, source material. Records of hospitals, organizations may have to be requested. See as is—define terms, be rid of superfluous material.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accent on commitment, intensified relationship, investment, promotion and production, more responsibility and money. Capricorn, Cancer and the number 8 figure prominently. Older individual is an ally—and proves it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are due for wider recognition. What seemed a "bad deal" turns out to be a boon. You'll get credit for wise choice. There is room for you at more elevated position. Civic honor could come your way. Finish rather than start—trust own judgment.

IF OCTOBER 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you have unusual voice and a "sweet tooth." You are attractive to opposite sex, made major domestic adjustment this year, will survive emotional setback—you will make love and money in November, more so than in recent past. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. You make valuable, new contact in December. You are intense, dedicated, diplomatic when necessary, ready to fight when you feel cause is right. You are creative, passionate, stubborn. You are an excellent judge of art objects, luxury items, even though not an expert in formal sense. Your instincts serve as reliable guide.

Soviet exiles urge NATO pressure on rights

OTTAWA (CP) — Ten Soviet exiles urged NATO countries Monday to force the Soviet Union to live up to its 1975 promises to respect its citizens' human rights.

Western countries should nullify the 1975 Helsinki agreement on European security and human rights if the Soviet Union continues to jail and deport people who fight for their rights, the exiles told a session of the North Atlantic Assembly, a NATO parliamentary group.

"Either force the Soviet Union to fulfil its promises or say that the Helsinki accord is no longer in force," said exiled Soviet Maj.-Gen. Pyotr Grigorenko.

He added that "for human rights Western countries should not be afraid to stand up."

Earlier Monday, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald promised the exiles she would speak out publicly on human rights issues at next year's Madrid conference on European security and human rights, a follow-up to Helsinki.

As Miss MacDonald, accompanied by Grigorenko and his wife, was leaving the news conference, there was an angry confrontation between the former dissidents, all now living outside the Soviet Union, and Andrei Sandakov, Canadian correspondent for Novosti Press agency.

Mrs. Grigorenko asked Sandakov whether he was aware normal people are forced into Soviet psychiatric hospitals because of their religious and political views.

Surrounded by radio, television and newspaper reporters, Sandakov told the Grigorenkos that Soviet authorities deny normal people are placed in psychiatric hospitals.

Grigorenko said he was thrown into a psychiatric hospital twice for his political views.

Sandakov said he can't understand why the NATO group is giving the Soviet exiles a platform.

He asked several Canadian journalists how Canada would feel if the Soviet Union expressed support for Quebec separatists or Indian groups battling the federal government.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, a British engineer who spent 10 years in prisons in the Soviet Union has asked visitors to the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow not to buy souvenirs there because he says they are made by slave labor.

Mykola Budulyak-Sharygin said Monday at a news conference that prisoners in three Soviet prison camps are manufacturing souvenir Olympic medals, lapel buttons and cuddly Misha bears, the symbol of the Moscow Olympics.

"If you go to Moscow for the Olympic Games, remember that slave labor is still being used for these products," said Sharygin, in town with nine other Soviet exiles to address the North Atlantic Assembly, a NATO parliamentary group.

Sharygin, an electronics engineer, said that while he was in Soviet prisons he made spare parts for cars, radio components and electric motors which were exchanged with a Western firm, Rank Xerox, for manufactured equipment.

And in Parliament Monday, members of the House of Commons agreed unanimously to urge the Czechoslovakian government to ensure fair and open trial for a group of human rights activists in Prague.

Those charged apparently are members of a movement that was known as Charter 77.

Charter 77 took its name from the Helsinki accords signed by East and West Europeans, and the United States.

Pappajohn back in court

OTTAWA (CP) — A man accused of rape should be allowed to plead that he honestly believed the woman was consenting to intercourse, the Supreme Court of Canada was told Monday.

Under the present laws the Crown has only to prove rape by establishing that a man had intercourse with a woman who was ot his wife and that the woman did not consent to the act.

Douglas Brown, appearing for Vancouver management consultant George Pappajohn, told the court the defence of honest belief has been pleaded in lower courts but that the Supreme Court itself has neither approved nor disapproved of it.

The court reserved decision Monday.

Pappajohn was convicted of raping a woman in his own home in August, 1976. The woman, who came to his home because she had been hired to help Pappajohn sell it, testified she was raped four or five times, once when she was bound and gagged.

Pappajohn testified that he believed the woman consented to his advances. He said that she put up only token protests in the three hours she was with him.

The trial judge said he considered arguments that an honest belief was a defence in rape cases but said that it did not arise in the Pappajohn case. He then refused to put the defence to the jury.

Pappajohn then appealed to the British Columbia Court of Appeal on grounds the judge erred in law by not telling the jury that Pappajohn could be found innocent if he proved that he believed the woman was a willing sex partner.

The B.C. court in a 2-to-1 decision upheld the trial judge and and the three-year prison sentence. Pappajohn has been free on bail because of the appeal.

JOY-RIDING, beer-swilling youths whooped it up along New Glasgow, N.S., streets during the weekend as police remained on strike to back wage demands. Some store windows were smashed and racing was reported along streets, but there were no injuries. Police are providing emergency services.

Single father wins benefits battle

TORONTO (CP) — A single father has won a 20-month battle with the province to receive family benefits assistance.

An order-in-council from the Ontario cabinet said Monday that Leonard Walker — a full-time, second-year law student at the University of Windsor — will receive $300 a month during the school year to help him raise his six-year-old daughter.

The Burlington, Ont., man will not get benefits when he works full-time during the summer, nor will the money be retroactive.

An official at the ministry of community and social services said the province awarded Walker the benefits because it recognized "it was beneficial for Walker to complete his education and he needed time to look after his daughter.

Walker, who has had custody of his only child since his divorce last year, said earlier he was $14,000 in debt because of his education and living expenses.

Pension bill wins approval

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill ensuring elderly widows and widowers are provided with spouse's pension benefits was approved in principle and sent to committee for further study after second reading in the Commons Monday.

It is the Progressive Conservative government's first bill of the new Parliament to be steered into committee and it happened after just one day's debate and with no opposition.

Most MPs praised the bill saying such legislation which would affect an estimated 2,200 recipients — mostly women, between 60 and 65 years old — should have been enacted years ago.

An allowance of up to $301 is paid to pensioner's spouses who are between 60 and 65. It terminates six months after the pensioner dies, leaving the spouse without resources when it may be needed most.

The bill will apply to spouses of pensioners who died during the six months before passage.

It will also ensure continuation of pensions and allowances should the partner receiving the alowance be sentenced to prison for more than 90 days.

Relief sought on troops' rents

CALGARY (CP) — Defence Minister Allan McKinnon said Monday he will ask the treasury board to investigate means of easing the burden placed on soldiers and their families affected by rent increases on military-base housing here.

McKinnon said in a telephone interview that complaints about the rent increases have been passed on to him by members of Parliament from across the country.

He said it is his understanding that the military is protected by a stipulation that no more than 25 per cent of a soldier's monthly salary can be charged for base accommodation.

"Nevertheless, the situation facing some families may be serious indeed. I'll be asking treasury board to cap increases hurting the lower ranks."

There were rent increases imposed on base housing last Nov. 1. A second increase has been postponed from Nov. 1 this year until a military pay increase is approved by the treasury board. A third increase is set for next May 1.

McKinnon said he expects the treasury board will approve the pay raise within the next two weeks.

Klan offers aid to end mutilations

CALGARY (CP) — The Ku Klux Klan of Alberta is offering its services to put an end to recent cattle mutilations in the province.

Rev. Tierlach Machpersoin, a Klan spokesman, said the group could end the mutilations within one month.

But he did not say how the Klan would do the job.

Education study gets more time

By AB KENT

District 61 school trustees voted 6-2 Monday to extend the life of the Gillie commission on education for nine months at a cost of $32,000.

The move came after chairman Bernard Gillie, a retired education official, said his interim report tabled Monday is a "rather pallid document" and only a brief outline of with what he sees as the final report.

"I guarantee it will not be dull," Gillie told the board.

Cost of the commission so far has been $56,250. Members of the task group have received 110 submissions, including some 200 recommendations and expect to get more.

Gillie said what is wanted now from the board, administrative staff and schools is feedback.

His report lists 15 areas of major concern with junior secondary schools being singled out for the most questions and criticizm from parents, teachers and students.

That area is one of six to which the commission wants to devote special attention.

The others, not in order of priority, are personnel policies affecting teachers, special education, vocational education, kindergarten-primary programs and a survey to determine why students drop out.

Gillie said he still wants to interview 50-75 teachers.

Trustee Peter Yorke, saying he was not enthused about the commission from the start, said he is disappointed with the interim report: "It is worse than I expected."

The commission had broadened its scope far beyond his expectation, Yorke said.

But if it will produce the "goodies" as promised, Yorke said he feels $32,000 is a cheap price to pay for extending its term.

Mark Fisher said he is not convinced of the commission's effectiveness and if he were, he would rather spend $500,000 for results.

Spending $32,000 more is not going to make much difference, he said.

"Trustees have damn little impact on the momentum of the system over a short period."

Susan Brice said she is afraid the report will be just another dusty tome ignored on a library shelf.

School policy backed

Civic politicians were out in force as Greater Victoria school trustees Monday endorsed a policy for community schools.

Mayoralty candidates, aldermen and NDP MLA Charles Barber, many wearing James Bay lapel badges, were among about 40 spectators present at the board meeting.

Superintendent Allen Stables said a recent court decision recognizes funding and teacher appointments as being within the province of school boards and said he had no hesitation in recommending the policy.

The policy will see any new community school be given a one-year approval, after which evaluation will be carried out for successive three-year periods.

The decision will help developments at Spectrum School, trustee Martin Levin said, and may also achieve full community status for South Park School.

Levin said community interest in the alternative school system was evidenced by the presence of aldermen William Tindall, John Hayes, Robin Blencoe, Ron McKenzie, Murray Glazier and William McElroy.

The community school affords a wide range of educational, social, cultural, recreational and problem-solving opportunities in day and evening programs.

Sam and Rosina Voas celebrate anniversary in song

A sweet old song of love

Love's Old Sweet Song was never sweeter for Sam and Rosina Voas than on Monday at Matson Lodge.

Sam (Play It Again Sam) Voas tickled the ivories while his wife trilled a tune to mark their first wedding anniversary.

It was a double celebration for both. Voas was celebrating his 93rd birthday and their anniversary. She was celebrating her 100th birthday and anniversary. They were married on Oct. 21, 1978, by Brig. William Hosty, administrator of the Salvation Army facility.

Their courtship lasted two months. She had met Sam on her first visit to Matson Lodge, attracted to him as she entered andheard him playing.

It is the third marriage for both.

What is married life like after one year?

Voas smiled and his wife, pressing his hand, said, "Better; we know more about each other."

She chided him shyly as Voas said he was surprised at the suite which was given them after their marriage.

"There were two double beds instead of one single. There was lots of room to kick and roll around."

What did he give his wife on their anniversary?

He said it was a modern watch that could be taken apart and put together again. They'd taken the watch apart but hadn't managed the second part.

Shoot! It's the pits

Saanich Ald. Sandy Noel thought it was a bang-up idea but Ald. Irene Block didn't think it was much to crow about.

So council's bylaw enforcement committee Monday referred a crow shoot proposal to next year's budget committee.

If Noel's brainstorm had been adopted, the municipality would have sponsored a shoot similar to those once run by the provincial game department.

A shotgun shell would be awarded for each dead crow turned in.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said the crows — garbage collectors in black — are increasing while the songbird population is decreasing.

He said he'd like to have information from a reliable body on crow populations now and a decade ago.

A motion to ask the municipal staff to get the information and report back next month was passed.

Ald. Block wasn't impressed.

"I have lost cherries to robins," she said. "Are we going to shoot all of them as well?"

She said she doesn't see crows as villains and suggested "we lay this matter to rest in a big black coffin."

Saanich leary of emergency plan bylaw

The spectre of Hitler and haunting memories of a misused War Measures Act hovered over the gentle municipal chambers of Saanich Monday night as council deliberated the draft of an emergency program bylaw.

Ald. Howard Sturrock said the bylaw was reminiscent of the War Measures Act, and he reminded aldermen of how the Trudeau government's perception of "a state of apprehended insurrection" had been grossly inaccurate.

Sturrock said he could not support a bylaw "which gives such tremendous powers" until it is given much more study.

"We are considering an emergency," Mayor Mel Couvelier said. "It's unbelievable that elected people would back off from assuming responsibility in an emergency."

Sturrock said he wasn't opposed to such a bylaw and he isn't afraid of accepting responsibility.

"But I want to see a document with more complete details of what constitutes an emergency."

Ald. John Mika also shied away from a bylaw that could lead to an abuse of power. He said Hitler abused power, and he reminded council that there had been instances of misused power in B.C.

"Considering the mayor we have, we could have an abuse of power with such a document."

THe bylaw was tabled to the next meeting of council's protective services committee.

Under the bylaw, Emergency Measures co-ordinator Jack Bush explained, "the mayor is the supreme power. He can take any action he deems necessary, he's all powerful."

He said council initiative for the bylaw had been on the books since 1962, but could offer no reason why it had not been drafted sooner.

The bylaw gives municipal leaders, in the event of a national or civil emergency, the power to ensure that lives and property are protected, assistance that can be provided by the continuation of government.

An emergency, as defined by the draft bylaw, means an emergency proclaimed under the Emergency Program Act or a declaration made by the Saanich council.

Sidewalk sharing with cyclists eyed

Cyclists and pedestrians can share sidewalks as far as Saanich aldermen are concerned.

But Ald. Sandy Noel's eyewitness account of a cyclist being hit by a car on Shelbourne prompted aldermen to call for a report on the feasibility of cyclists and pedestrians sharing sidewalks.

This is the opposite to what happened in Victoria.

Spurred by visitor complaints, Victoria aldermen had police crack down on cyclists and joggers using city sidewalks.

Noel suggested a pedestrian-cyclist mix on one side of the busier Saanich streets.

Ald. Geoff Vantreight said there should be a law requiring cyclists to use available bike paths. He said the Feltham Road path is scarcely used.

B.C. bid backed

B.C.'s bid to host a world-class exposition on transportation has received a boost in the way of moral support from the federal government.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis, the mover behind the project, said External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald has pledged full federal support when the B.C. Transpo '86 proposal comes before the International Bureau of Expositons in Paris next month.

"The next several months are critical as the IBE reviews our proposal in detail," Curtis said.

Curtis heads to Paris for the IBE meeting at the end of November.

The coach of a women's gymnastics team from China, now touring the U.S., has car trouble with a twist. How does he get the new automobile he won home?

Qu Derai was given a chance at firing the puck at the net during intermission at a hockey game in Connecticut and was told through an interpreter that he would be given a new car if he could fire the puck through the tiny opening in the net. When Derai made the shot from 20 metres away, the more than 4,000 fans cheered wildly. He was then presented the keys to a new auto. Derai and other members of the Chinese delegation then took turns driving the car in the garage area of the building.

Oswald

Another person with car trouble was Princess Margaret. She couldn't find a bullet-proof Rolls Royce to take her to officiate at the dedication of a new Rolls dealership in Beverly Hills. She arrived instead in an armored Cadillac.

Pope John Paul received former U.S. state secretary Henry Kissinger in a private audience.

Steven West, flamboyant former chairman of the defunct Federal's department store chain in the U.S., has declared personal bankruptcy. West, 37, lists debts of $8,337,161.23 and assets of less than $6,800. West, who once wrote a book entitled How to Live Like a Millionaire, could not be reached for comment.

The master photographer, Henri Cartier-Bresson, is coming to New York from his home in Paris for the Nov. 11 opening of a 50-year retrospective of his work. But although he has photographed some of the world's great artists and writers, such as Matisse, Bonnard, Faulkner and Jean-Paul Sartre, he is himself camera-shy and does not want his picture taken. On top of that, the 71-year-old photographer has instructed that he does not want to be interviewed, for he is not interested in talking about himself, and besides, "talking about photography is boring."

Marguerite Oswald, mother of Lee Harvey Oswald, says the exhumation of her son's body would not help determine who killed John F. Kennedy and that the theory by a British author that a Soviet agent and not her son is in the grave is "asinine."

Dear Abby:

Some people sure have evil minds. (Including you!) Why should anyone suspect Beverly of hanky-panky because she leaves home at 6 a.m. for a 15-minute drive to a job that doesn't begin until 8 a.m.?

I'm not due at my job until 8 a.m. but I always get there at 7 a.m. That's the only time of day I don't have to put up with ringing telephones and kids yelling and fighting. The office is quiet, and I use the time to organize my day's work.

Also, I take the bus, and it's never crowded at 6:30 a.m., the traffic isn't as heavy, and I never have to stand up.

I can't see dashing through the office door just before the clock strikes 8 the way most of my co-workers do. Some are so nervy they arrive at 8 a.m., prepare coffee and sit around drinking it until 8:30!

No Slacker

Dear No Slacker:

Let's hear it from Dottie:

Dear Abby:

I must come to the defense of Beverly, the perfectly groomed, beautiful woman who leaves her house at 6 a.m. for a 15-minute drive to an office where she isn't due until 8 a.m.

A reader asked what she did with all that extra time. He even hinted that perhaps she arrived at work disheveled — and with a few spangles missing.

Well, I leave my house at 5:50 a.m. and arrive at 6:10 a.m. for an 8 to 4 job because I like it that way!

I make no stops and arrive as neat as when I left home. No one is at work, either, in case you might think I'm meeting someone there.

I set things up for my day's work, and if I have something special that requires my full concentration, I prefer to do it then. I also read my newspaper in peace and quiet.

Dottie

Dear Abby:

Our guests use a sofa-bed in the library where all our books are kept.

Several days ago my husband and I were discussing a certain book, so I went to get it. It was gone. In fact, on the same shelf I saw four 'holes' where four other books had been. I hate to think that one of our houseguests had taken these books, but there is no other explanation.

My question: if I should visit the home of one of these guests and see a book I'm sure is mine, should I ignore it, or say something? And if you think I should say something, what should I say?

Disappointed

Dear Disappointed:

Don't ignore it. Say, 'I see you were so fascinated with my book that you took it home to finish it. May I have it now?'

Public less fashion-fooled

A better-informed public has produced buyer resistance in many areas — not the least being the fashion world says Victoria fashion co-ordinator Kip Wallis.

"We've hit the stage where women definitely more knowledgable than ever before," she said. "For example, last year the 'Retro Look' was announced. The buyers simply didn't want it and didn't take to it. They had the last word. The designers couldn't sell it — and there's nothing to strike terror in a designer's heart as much as when they see one of their creations stay on the rack."

Wallis was interviewed amidst preparations for Eaton's fall fashion show — sold out for each night Wednesday and Thursday this week in the Victoria Room at the store.

These shows have really taken off, partially because it's a fantastic dinner (Cornish game hen) and of course the show — all for $7.50."

Wallis said that because the show is produced also as entertainment, its 360 patrons enjoy broader aspects than "just your boring one, two, three, four models coming out in sequence and going back."

The show, she said, will feature "fun, dancing ... some takeoffs on the crazier aspects of fashion."

A Halloween theme will be worked in this year with masks and sparklers — "and of course we have to tell people about fashion, too."

The show this week features eight models ranging in age from 20 years to 76-year-old Maud Parks.

"Maud has modelled for us for some 15 years," said Wallis. "Now you'll be seeing her soon in the coming issue of Canadian Living."

Wallis said the challenge of presenting fashion in Victoria is that there are people on budgets and people with a lot of money to spend.

"We have to consider the elderly people who don't get off on disco, but also the young who don't just want to show up in their ultra-suede," she said.

Model Parks agreed, and said that while she enjoys freelance work for Victoria area department stores primarily because of her interest in people, she does have a more specific purpose.

"I do think that here in Victoria we have a great many women over 65 — so because of that the older women who still want to look very smart are so glad to see someone their own age in the kind of apparel they like," she said. "There has been lots of work for me — not that I've really sought it. It has sought me."

Parks, sometimes with her husband J.D., also appears in television commercials and printed promotions for such projects as Laurel Point and the Princess Marguerite. She did some modelling in Toronto as a young girl, but didn't resume it until retiring here after a career in optometry.

Wallis said with a model like Parks, the interested buyer can look at clothing worn by a model and say "That's not too far out, I'd feel comfortable in that."

Men's fashion, she said, is just taking off here now.

"We have one man — Malcolm Anderson, the former alderman — who is a regular. With more and more designers turning towards the men's market, he is developing a real following."

Wallis said she approves of increased activity in the male fashion world, though concedes she is "not sure I want to be competing with my husband."

Wallis said she was in New York this year — and while she recognizes such a centre, along with Montreal and Paris, is a big fashion centre, she is weary of the notion that all fashion activity is "in the East."

"I'm very pro-Canada and particularly pro-Victoria," she said. "So many people say, 'Well, back East ...' and I really take exception. B.C. designers have the ideas and that's what the whole fashion world is about.

She said some recognition is beginning to happen where now the major eastern designers are producing two different lines each season, "one for the different lifestyle on the West Coast and for what they need in the cold country. I'm sure our own designers could and should get on the ball and produce the same."

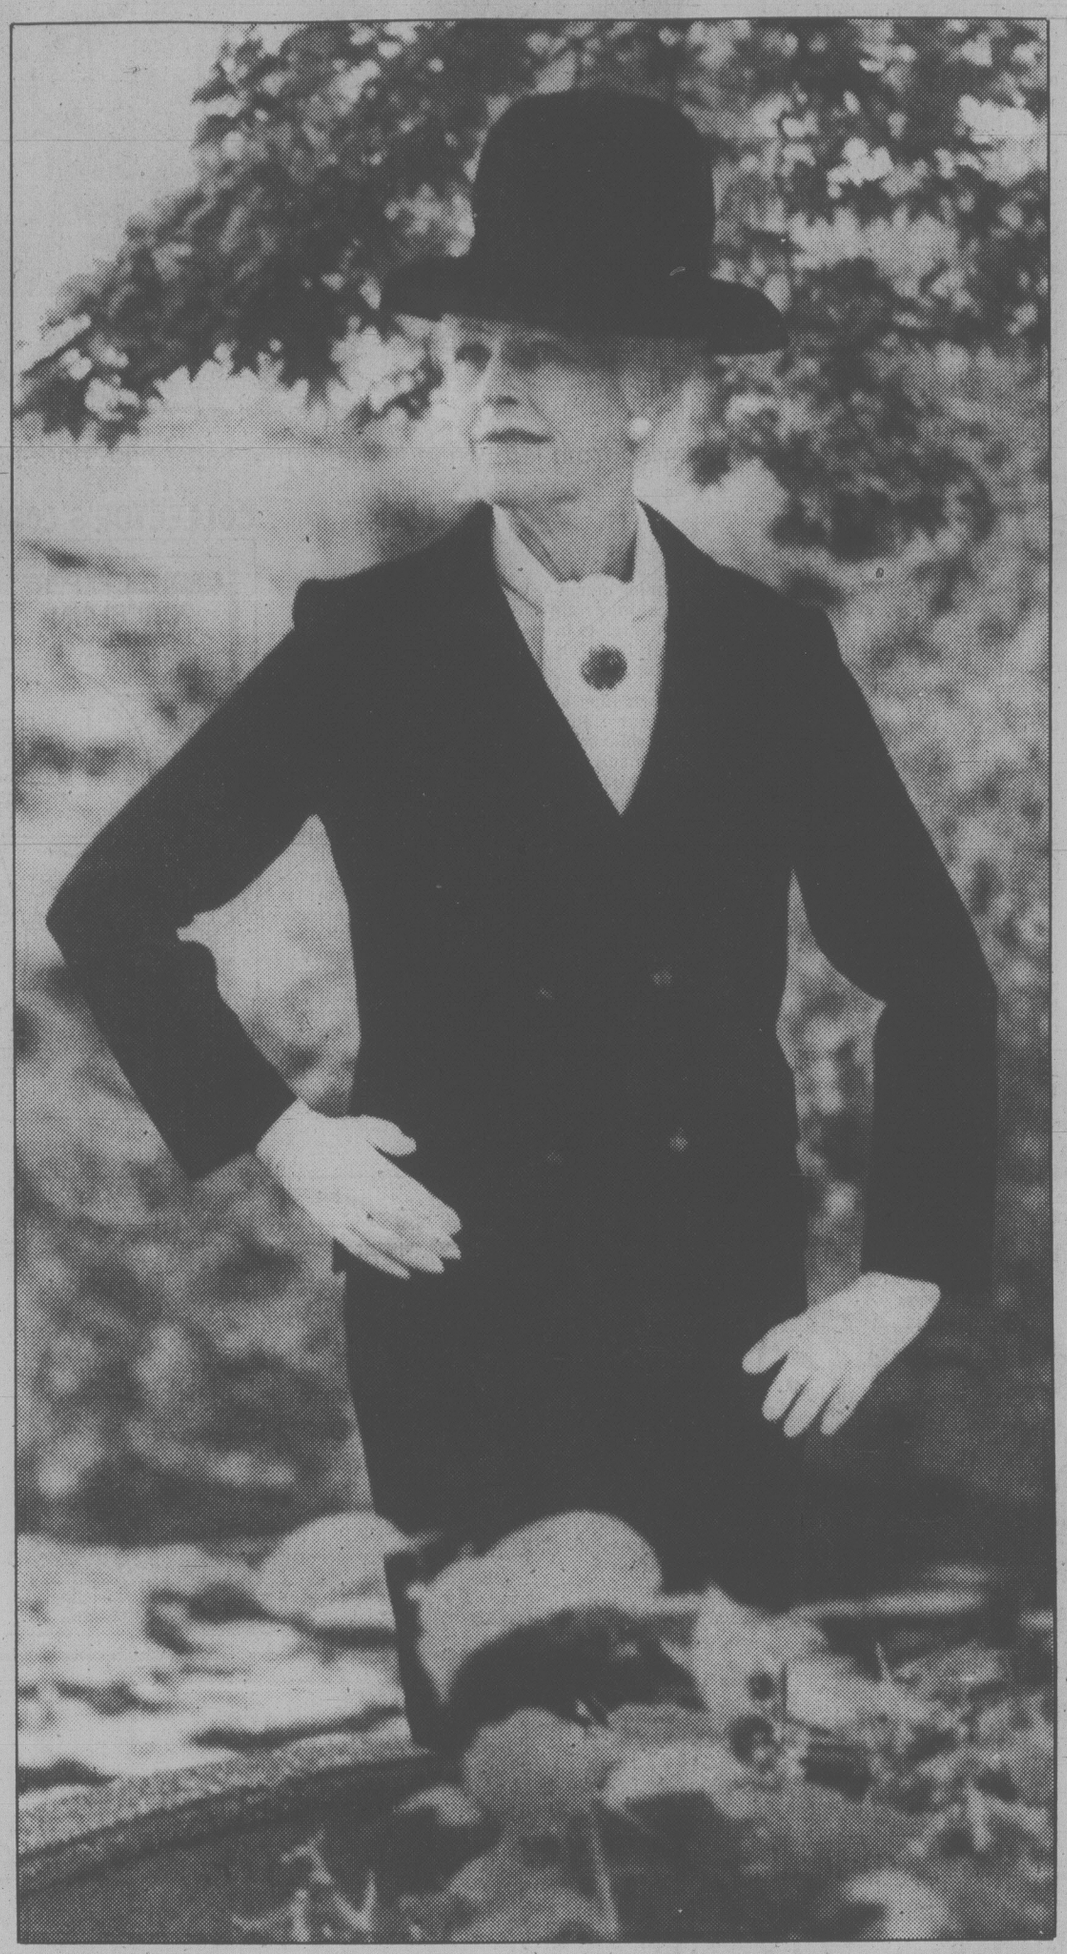
Wallis said with huge amounts of money spent by families each year for clothing — and with massive fashion advertising programs — "you're bound to get interested in the way you look, just a little bit more than you have before."

Next, she said, it is perfume for men — a line of which is now carried by the Eaton's chain and which will be featured in this week's Victoria show.

Commenting on the latest push by leading world designers to bring back the mini skirt, Wallis said that if it does return it will be in an altogether different form than when it appeared in the sixties.

"If the mini comes back it will be vastly different from what it was," she said. "Before it was just like a little bag — now it will be more structured, fitting the body but just a shorter length. They say the tougher the times, the shorter the skirt — I couldn't say for sure."

Eaton's next fashion presentation will be at the store Nov. 21 when the theme will be glamor and the approaching festive season.



SEVENTY-SIX—YEAR-OLD Maud Parks of Victoria is no flash in the pan when it comes to her modelling career. Since she moved to the city from Ontario years ago she's been kept hopping as a department store model — also finding time to squeeze in some commercial appearances for television. She will be appearing two nights this week in Eaton's annual fashion presentation.

Diseases still lurk despite vaccines

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

My neighbor said that one of her children had just gotten over diphtheria. I thought that diphtheria was a wiped-out disease.

Mrs. H.I.N.

Dear Mrs. N.:

It is a common misimpression that diphtheria no longer exists. It does. It is true that it is no longer one of the great threats to children. Vaccination and continued immunization have almost completely eradicated this life-threatening disease in North America.

The rightful pride in such an accomplishment must not be spoiled by those who neglect to give their children the benefit of immunization. To neglect the vaccination against diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, measles, polio, mumps and German measles is to deprive children of their right to health and life.

Dear Doctor:

I was discharged from the hospital six weeks ago after having spent almost two months there as a surgical patient. I am 72. I am grateful to be alive and want to thank the nurses who were so diligent and who played such an important part in my recovery. I want to call this to your readers' attention because far too often the nurse's contribution is overlooked.

Mr. G.G.S.

Dear Mr. S.:

Today's nurses are indisputably life-supporting elements of the health team. They are involved in every aspect of the patient's illness, recovery and rehabilitation. Comprehensive understanding of the patient's physical and emotional needs are an established part of their training.

In addition to providing proper medication and attending to the patient's physical needs, nurses offer reassurance and alleviation of fears and anxiety, which are as important to the patient's well-being as reading blood pressures and following physician's orders.

Nurses are trained today in the cultural and phychological sciences. They know that the fears of patients and their families must be explained during the entire period of illness, for the emotional stress of patients in hospitals can be severe and overwhelming. The degree of such fear is not necessarily related to the severity of the illness. In my opinion, this kind of caring is more an index of a nurse's accomplishment than is a tightly-cornered bedspread.

Liberated from the restricted confines of dedicated custodial care, the science of nursing has emerged as the amalgamation of the art and science of the healing of the total human being.

Old hats new rage

TORONTO (CP) — There is nothing new about the stetson.

It's been around for 100 years but suddenly everybody wants to look like a cowboy.

"It seems that when a man puts on a western hat," says Michael McMillan, president of Biltmore Industries, Canada's largest supplier of men's hats, "it gives him a very strong masculine look."

The word is that disco is dying and country and western bars are taking over in the U.S., another reason why the cowboy hat may be so popular.

In Toronto, skiers who love hats are shopping early and buying stetsons with chin straps so they stay on as the skiers blaze down the trails.

The stetsons cost $35 to $85 and come in 18 different styles — among them, wide, narrow and curved brims, high, low, punched-in, square and rounded-off crowns.

Are men wearing hats more today than four years ago?

"Definitely," says MacMillan. "Hats fit in with their shorter hair styles and dressier clothes.

"The best sellers are casual fabric hats with the turned-down brim and soft walking caps such as a soft wool knit dress cap similar to the newsboy cap but a little smaller in shape."

MacMillan says the most popular colors are brown, camel and grey. There are a few off-whites and bone shades that sell well.

If you're not the type to wait for the last minute, then chances are you've already made the arrangements to have your winter tires put on the family car. Actually, snow tires represent only a fraction of the preparations that you should be making for the winter months ahead.

The winter can be especially hard on your car's battery. It's a good idea to have your battery checked, and charged or replaced if necessary.

The big little book of safe winter driving is a 14-page booklet that aims at alleviating the frustration and danger that can affect every cold weather driver. You can receive a free copy of this booklet by sending a #10 self-addressed, stamped envelope to the Rubber Association of Canada, 100 University Avenue, Toronto, Ontario, M5J 1V8.

The International Labor Organization has been meeting annually since 1919. Conferences are attended by representatives of employers, workers, and governments from around the world.

In the 1950s, parole made its debut as part of our penal system. Criminals who were nearing the completion of long sentences, were permitted to go into the community daily so that they could get used to the society awaiting them.

Eventually, parole was granted on a full, as well as on a daily basis. When on full parole, an inmate lives in the community until his sentence expires. During this period he is under the supervision of a National Parole Service Officer.

Meeting the Challenge is a free pamphlet that discusses the particular conditions under which an inmate might be accorded a temporary absence. COLLECTOR'S CORNER BY TOM BATESON youth

Dear Dr. Levine:

I am a 14-year-old girl with an older brother and sister and a younger sister who eavesdropped on a telephone call. She got me into trouble with my big sister, who's always fighting with me — she starts most of the fights. When my dad gets mad, she tells him a lie and exaggerates. I try to tell him the truth, but it doesn't come out right and then my whole family's mad at me. Every night I go to bed and start crying. What does that mean? Does it mean they hate me?

Answer: The types of incidents you describe occur with regularity in many families. There is occasional bickering, name-calling, and tatling, but I hope there is also support, love, nurture and caring. If the bickering gets out of hand, the family may need professional guidance.

The thing to do is to speak to your parents, sisters and brother, about your feelings, ask their opinion of you, and what they think can be done about the situation. This, of course, would best not be done in the midst of a quarrel but rather when there is an atmosphere of congeniality and easy communication. If this fails, or if they are unwilling, in your estimation, to do anything about it, then you might well speak to a school or teen counsellor.

You are also going to have to spend some time and energy looking at your role in all of this. What responsibility (even if small) do you have in contributing to the atmosphere at home, and what can you do to make things better?

Dear Dr. Cotter:

I am a 16-year-old girl. Three months ago my boyfriend and I broke up after nine months. Afterwards our relationship was rotten. Recently, he started phoning me, and we have been getting along great.

I have done a lot of thinking. What really got him mad was the fact that I kept things to myself, or only told my best girlfriend. He said he loved me, but I was scared to say that to him, though it's true. But now I miss him a lot and want him back. How do I let him know this without thinking I'm nuts? What do I say?

Answer: Keeping things to yourself, and being unwilling to tell him about your feelings are signs that you and he will have to work out some way of communicating on important issues. You may be reticent because you lack self-assurance, or you may just lack self-assurance in the presence of someone you have fallen in love with.

You must learn to express your love, because you want him to do so too. Beyond that point, he must come to terms with you, after you have come to terms with yourself and your feelings and told him about them.

Dear Mr. Vichert:

I am a 15-year-old girl and go to high school. I know boys and talk to them but like them only as friends — I don't feel that I'm ready to go around with boys, just yet. Most girls my age have or are going out with boys. Do you think I am stupid because I don't want to go around with them?

At times, I feel lousy and think my personality and looks are lousy too. Sometimes I think I'll never have a real true boyfriend, but I'm hoping that will change.

Answer: It's very natural at 15 not to know for sure what you want. Because you are growing and changing the things that you want and like also change. If you think back over the past two years and see how you have changed, you will have some understanding of how fast these changes can take place.

It is natural for you to both want a steady boyfriend, and yet not want one, and you are right to feel that you are not yet ready. Having boys as friends helps to develop the confidence to ultimately know what you would like in a steady boyfriend.

Dear Dr. Powell:

I'm a 16-year-old girl in desperate need of some information. How would I go about getting the Pill and not have my parents find out about it? If I would go to my family doctor, would my parents get billed for this visit? Or should I just go to a free clinic?

Answer: If you want to take the Pill as a contraceptive, you do not need your parents' consent. Your family doctor should respect your wish to keep this confidential and should not discuss this with your parents without your permission. It is up to you to make sure of this when you see your doctor. Most doctors will accept this, but ask about the method of payment ahead of time.

Some girls decide to attend a clinic, where birth control counselling is provided and a method is prescribed. This is not a "free" clinic, but it receives funding from the ministry of health.

You know your parents and understand their attitudes, so you can be the best judge of what to tell them — many parents want to help their children and are anxious to be understanding. However, it is up to you to decide about using contraceptive devices. If you need a method of birth control, it is a responsible decision to go to a clinic for help but think about telling your mother that you are taking the Pill sometime in the future.

Too many sit in institutions

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians are on an institutional jag, placing more people in prisons, mental hospitals and old age homes proportionately than any other developed Western country, says a University of Toronto professor of social work. Albert Rose has found that elderly persons who still live in their neighborhoods, helped by family, friends, social services and their own determination, are happier than those who live in nursing homes at a much higher cost.

The doc is in

HOLME PIERREPOINT, England (CP) — Dr. Fred Moreland's patients always know where to find him — in the office. The doctor moved in there recently to get away from the noise of the Oscar Wilde discotheque next door to his home.

Men's styles more newsy

Christian Science Monitor

PARIS — Fashion trends in menswear do not change dramatically from one season to the next, but since France set out to capture an important percentage of the European sartorial market 10 years ago, the new looks definitely have been newsy.

Almost every leading couturier designs and manufactures his own line of men's suits, sportswear and accessories. And the width of a lapel, the cut of a collar or the color ranges capture as much attention as the high-fashion and ready-to-wear collections for women.

While the length of trousers is a far cry from the seesaw affair of hemlines, Monsieur seeks new prototypes to replace the drab conformist image of the man in the gray flannel suit.

This fall, the executive tailored to perfection in his three-piece business suit will be rivaled by three incoming trends: the gangster in pinstripe serge, complete with soaring lapels and fedora hat with wide, turned-down brim; "Superman," with exaggerated, tipped-up shoulders; and the athlete, epitomized in sportswear adapted for city streets.

French designers, especially in the lower price ranges, have fun with interpretations of the old zoot suit, with double-breasted jackets, pipe stem pants and fanciful, two-toned shoes with arrowhead toes.

There's also the mystery man, an incarnation of the spy on the now defunct Orient Express, edging along the corridors in the casually belted trench coat with collar turned up to meet the brim of his slouchy felt fedora.

Pierre Cardin's Superman suits definitely are not for the average man who heretofore has been embarrassed to wear anything that sets him apart from the great flock of lookalikes.

France follows the United States in concentration on fitness, diet and athletics. Stars of the sports world are pacesetters in the realm of fashion. There are adaptations of joggers' suits for businessmen who never dream of jogging, gamekeeper's suits for men who can't tell the difference between a partridge and a Paris pigeon,

PURE WOOL coat that travels anywhere is in a versatile three-quarter length grey tweed, worn with pure wool tweed skirt. Added is a chrome yellow wool/acrylic shirt, a sleeveless V-neck pull and yellow wool shawl.

Backless bridal leotard is a hands down loser

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times

PARIS — A funny thing happened at the end of the fashion shows for spring here. Nobody clapped.

It was the last of the mammoth presentations at the Salle Baltard, one of the three tents in which the spring and summer styles were shown.

The bride had appeared — she was wearing a backless silver lurex leotard — and had made the final march down the runway with a few dozen of her attendants. They were in backless black leotards. Instead of an avalanche of applause, there was silence.

Journalists packed up their notebooks and bade farewell to their friends until the next round of shows in six months. Buyers checked their appointment books to confirm where they would meet the next day to write orders for the clothes they had been seeing. The photographers, who are forming an international press committee to improve working conditions at the showings after one of them got slugged earlier in the week, held their first formal meeting in the back of the hall.

As the audience dispersed, one woman said loudly, "It's a disgrace — you call that design? It not original. God did it first."

She was referring to the backless look, which followed by a few numbers a topless look. The juxtaposition had many members of the audience humming the hit song from Chorus Line.

The bottomless styles were actually versions of the string bathing suit born in Brazil and the topless ones had been anticipated by Rudi Gernreich 15 years ago.

Earlier in the show there were miniskirts galore, especially knitted versions that cupped the buttocks, and some with side-buttons that opened from the bottom to unveil a little more skin. They set the scene for the greater exposure to come.

When it happened, the audience pretended it didn't exist. Even in Paris, the citadel of fashion, you can go too far.

An hour before, the applause was polite, even enthusiastic, for the Chanel ready-to-wear by Philippe Guibourget who reconstructed, at perhaps one-fifth the couture prices, the braid-bound cardigan suit and other Chanelisms that have endured for half a century.

Bernadette Chirac, the wife of the mayor of Paris, sat at the end of the runway in a pink-and-blue tweed quintessential Chanel suit from the couture (retail prices there start at $5,000), giving official approval to the proceedings. There wasn't any nudity. Next to her was Romy Schneider, the actress for whom Chanel herself did the costumes in "Last Year at Marienbad." Entertainers often like the assured respectability of the Chanel label.

The ready-to-wear collection is an attempt to broaden the scope of Chanel clients.

Guibourget has recreated the aura of the famous Mlle. Coco with her favorite accessories: the beige sling-back pump with its black leather toe (it now has a higher heel), her quilted handbags and hair bows at the top of shoulder-length bobs, which give the mannequins a demure jeune-fille look. He also uses the printed fabrics with playfully abstract forms that suggest the work of Miro. They are all over Paris, these prints, but here their childlike quality is emphasized.

The cardigan jackets are little longer than boleros for spring and summer. T-shirts are stamped with a picture of the classic perfume, Chanel No.5. Knitted cardigans, coats and raincoats in pale shades of irridescent taffeta, are other neo-Chanelisms.

For evening, everything is soft and supple in jersey or crepe, all in the purest white and worn with pearls. That too contributes to the enduring age of innocence.

Hanae Mori, the Japanese designer who has found a place for herself on the Avenue Montaigne, also had official approval. Eva Barre, wife of the premier of France, sat next to the Japanese ambassador, Katsuichi Ikawa, and his wife, Tomoko, at the show.

Predictably, the prints are outstanding, especially the Japanese-flavored ones, such as misty pink flowers drifting on a green chiffon field or orange flowers in a haze of pale chiffon. Delicate fans spaced on a white crepe background mark another of her evening styles. A print of automobiles of various nations, identified by the country flag, was a conversation piece. But the sweaters were another surprise. Cheerful designs with the ubiquitous Miro character are knitted into pullovers that look chic with pants.

The short skirts are the most obvious feature of this crop of Paris fashions. But while they grab the headlines, the American buyers are concentrating on the more conventional designs such as the two-color outfits that graphically contrast black with white or subtler pastel shades with each other; the fluid no-waistline chemise dress, cool and comfortable for warm weather; the passing of the giant shoulder pad.

Office attire affects scope

LONDON (UPI) - Personnel chiefs might like to look at women in the office who wear revealing clothing but they don't promote them.

That is the conclusion reached by a British clothing firm after interviewing 50 leading British employers.

The firm, Act III, advised women who want to get ahead in business to avoid deep-plunging necklines, thigh-high split skirts, and any see-through fabrics. Anything designed to show more flesh than flair for the job can only take away from whatever skills are posessed regarding the the latter when it comes time to gather impressions for promotions or just even day-to-day considerations for responsibility, the firm determined in its study.

The miniskirt, which might be making a comeback, is described as a don't for career women.

Denim casuals, bare midriffs and very bright colorers also are considered inadvisable.

Instead, the firm suggests short, tweedy jackets, and tweedy skirts with a modest slit.

"Most new fashions are eye-catching," said Jeffrey Kalb, 42, marketing manager of Act III. "They make you aware of the wearer's body. That's fine at a party, employers say. "But in the boardroom?"

But top fashion designer Yuki, who specializes in glamorous clothes, disagreed.

"There must be something wrong with these men," she said. "I suppose they're afraid their power of concentration will be destroyed."

Trailer crisis as black day nears

By PAUL MINVIELLE

Oct. 31, 1979.

For the remaining residents of Centennial Trailer Park at 1455 Craigflower the date looms like some huge wall, invisible yet definite. By the end of that day, the residents and their mobile homes must be elsewhere.

The park, operated by Litwin Construction Ltd., is on land leased from Chief John Albany of the Songhees Indian Band.

Since first receiving eviction notices June 28, residents petitioned, pleaded and prayed, to no avail.

Politicians and bureaucrats alike, even those who said they wanted to help, have been unable to do anything.

Some Centennial residents, such as 76-year-old William Hobday, had anticipated living out their remaining years in their own trailer homes, proudly independent of welfare or any other government program.

Since a Times report Oct. 5 on the residents' plight, Hobday has found a place to relocate his trailer.

Ted and Bev Sanderson have also found a place to relocate — five miles the other side of Sooke. They would have been happier to stay closer to the city.

"Some of those places (other trailer parks) just don't take children," Mrs. Sanderson said. The Sandersons have three girls.

Another notice was sent to the tenants in the past few days, reminding them again that they must be out by Oct. 31, and that power, water and sewer facilities will be cut off Nov. 1.

Marie Sled managed to sell her trailer for $6,000. She was asking $10,000.

"I'm glad to be out from under," she said.

She said the mobile home is headed for Hornby Island.

Mrs. Christine Reiter also sold, and is moving into a suite.

"It's too bad, but what can a person do?"

Mrs. Irene Krause hasn't been able to sell her mobile. Asked how things were going, she replied: "There's nowhere to go."

"People are eager to buy (her mobile home), but there's nowhere to put it," she said.

Mrs. Ernest Klausen lost her husband in the spring. Hard on the heels of her husband's death came the eviction notice.

"It's been a rough year," she said, adding that she has been unable to sell her 55-foot home, even at a low asking price of $5,000.

"I'm still here. I have to leave sometime this week," Mrs. Klausen said.

She thinks she might have to put the unit on a trailer sales lot, thus having to pay a commission.

She hasn't yet looked for an apartment.

'You're fighting the whole time and you put it off. It's sort of silly, isn't it?"

She has sons and daughters in the city, and can stay with one of them temporarily if she can't find an apartment quickly.

There are other units for sale at Centennial. The owners either can't move into other parks because of adult-only policies, or they simply can't afford the increased rent. Some don't want to move to the other side of Sooke or the top of the Malahat or Nanaimo or anywhere else that isn't in Greater Victoria.

In the meantime, carpenters and other tradesmen are working on adjacent property. The townhouse project that signalled the end of the trailer and mobile home park has already begun.

The townhouses that some mobile home salesmen confidently predicted would never be built on leased land are rising — on leased land.

And the lives of the people in 22 mobile homes and trailers are being disrupted. For them, Oct. 31, 1979, is a black day.

Montreal man swept to sea

An afternoon of fun at Botanical Beach near Port Renfrew turned into a nightmare Sunday for a group of young volunteer workers when one of them was swept out to sea and apparently drowned.

While walking along a beach three members of a national volunteer service called Katimavik slipped on wet rocks and fell into the water.

Two were pulled out but Gaytienne Beausoleil, 19, of Montreal disappeared.

Capt. E. Alford of Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt said a search by the RCMP was hampered by high winds and rain.

"The search continued Monday with helicopters searching the shoreline and the bay, but nothing has turned up," he said.

The others who fell in the water were treated in hospital for minor injuries but their names were not released.

Alford said about 30 members of the service from across Canada are staying on the Esquimalt base taking three months of basic training so they can join reserve units in their hometowns.

"We've had the training program here for about 18 months," said Alford. "We usually get groups of 30 aged 17 to 21. They exchange their services to the community for room and board and the training."

Katimavik has more than 1,400 youths enrolled in community programs across Canada. The youths spend nine months in various Canadian cities and receive a $1,000 scholarship upon completion of the program.

PSAC radio ops strike escalates

OTTAWA (CP) — Leaders of the union representing some 1,200 government-employed air and marine radio operators said today that rank-and-file members are on a full strike across the country, limiting their work to emergency and distress calls only.

Spokesmen for the Public Service Alliance of Canada radio operations group said at a news conference that the operators at airports across the country gradually escalated to a full strike over the last three days without any order to do so from union leaders.

Union leaders said that air safety is no longer guaranteed because of the dispute.

They said pilots are being forced in some cases to take off and land without runway lights, that planes have had to abort landings to avoid danger and that vehicles on runways have ended up in ditches to avoid landing aircraft.

Yvon Dembers, executive-secretary of the Union of Canadian Transportation Employees, said the operators had been performing essential services during the dispute but now have reduced that to only answering distress calls and guiding emergency flights.

Among the essential services no longer being provided are collection and transmission from coast guard radio stations of ice conditions, buoys off position and other information to ships.

He said there is no great danger to the travelling public at major airports controlled by air traffic controllers and instrument flight landing systems.

But among the dangerous incidents he cited was one in Toronto last week in which he said two planes had to abort an immediate landing when the instrument flight system failed allegedly because an unqualified manager was doing the job of a radio operator.

Meantime, union negotiator Bob Delage said the union is willing at any time of day or night to resume contract negotiations with government representatives.

He said the strike could be ended if the government offered "an increase a little higher than the one we have been offered now."

A mediator has met with each side in the dispute separately over the last four days. No date has been set for a resumption of talks, Delage said.

The government has offered the operators a seven-per-cent wage increase each year in a two-year contract. The union seeks a 15-per-cent increase in the first year and an increase equal to the rise in the cost of living in the second year, he said.

CRTC quashes cable merger

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission Monday rejected a proposed merger involving Western Broadcasting Co. Ltd. and Premier Cablevision Ltd., two of the largest groups in the Canadian broadcasting system.

"The commission is not satisfied that the applicants adequately demonstrated that approval of the present applications would result in significant and unequivocal benefits to the public and to the Canadian broadcasting system," it said.

Nor had the applicants showed that the proposed projects the new company promised could not be accomplished without the joint ownership and control of Western and Premier, the commission added.

Under the merger, a new company would have acquired 55 per cent of Western's shares and 50.5 per cent of Premier's. Western and Premier own AM and FM radio, television and cablevision licences in various parts of the country, mostly in British Columbia and the Toronto-Hamilton area.

In their application the two companies said the merger would allow them to increase production of television programs and films, increase research and development and pay more attention to community needs.

The commission commented that it heard little detailed evidence on these statements of intent.

The commission also dismissed arguments that the merger would ensure that control of Western and Premier would continue to reside in British columbia, thus offsetting the domination of TV and cable interests in Central Canada.

"The commission is not persuaded either that approval of these applications is necessary to preserve British Columbia-based control of the broadcasting undertakings involved," it said.

It noted that 57 per cent of Western shareholders, representing 41 per cent of its shares, reside outside B.C. In the case of premier, approximately 50 per cent of its shareholders, representing 42 per cent of all shares, reside outside the province.

The commission also took the view that such regional considerations should be of concern to it coming to a decision.

The commissioners acknowledged what they called excellent interventions from those opposing the merger. These concerns included concentration of ownership and likely conflicts in board policy due to the opposing interests of TV stations and cable systems.

However because of its own reasoning "it does not consider it necessary to address those issues further in the present decision."

Two of the eight commissioners disagreed with the majority decision.

Well-known local lawyer dies

Well-known Victoria lawyer Kenneth Cox died Monday after a sudden illness.

A member of the firm of Owen-Flood, Cox, Turnham, Green and Higinbotham, he had practised law for more than two decades.

His brother Allan, formerly mayor of Oak Bay and a member of another prominent Victoria law firm, said he had undergone an emergency operation about three weeks ago.

Cox had been actively involved in federal and provincial affairs of the Liberal party, he said.

Cox, 45, is survived by his wife Gail and two children.

Tribute to Cox was paid today by both lawyers and judges at a brief ceremony at the courthouse.

Jakob de Villiers, president of the Victoria Bar Association, described Cox as reliable, efficient and a gentleman.

"He was the kind of lawyer clients liked to entrust their affairs to," he said.

Dermod Owen-Flood, a partner of Cox, said: "I have lost the best friend I ever had. He was the kindest and most compassionate person I ever knew."

Mr. Justice Allan Macfarlane of the B.C. Supreme Court said he was saddened by Cox' death.

"He was competent and diligent and a good friend, a good sport and with sparkling good humor."

Also present at the ceremony were county court Judge E.J.C. Stewart, court officials and a number of lawyers.

Death penalty decision facing Esquimalt MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Esquimalt-Saanich Conservative MP Don Munro is trying to decide whether to proceed soon with his private member's bill to restore the death penalty or wait until there is a better chance it will come to a vote.

If Munro wants, his bill calling for execution of murderers could be the first private member's bill considered by the new Parliament.

But he is not sure he wants to be first among the 288 private members' bills that back-benchers plan to introduce in the Commons.

Munro said in an interview he might wait until he has some assurance the bill will come to a vote — something Prime Minister Joe Clark has promised can happen.

Munro's dilemma began Friday when there was a draw to determine the order the 288 bills will be considered. There are seldom more than 25 bills considered during an eight-month session so the draw is important.

A business bill drafted by Munro was drawn first and his capital punishment bill 56th. He can, however, switch the order of those bills.

Three other Conservatives — John Kushner (Calgary-East), Stan Graham (Kootenay East-Revelstoke) and Lorne Greenaway (Caribou-Chilcotin) — had death-penalty bills drawn ahead of Munro's.

Mussallem dies at 69

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial court Judge Nicholas Mussallem, a colorful figure in law courts for more than 40 years, died today after a two-year illness. He was 69.

Mussallem was born in Prince Rupert and was a member of a promiment British Columbia family.

ESQUIMALT, CLOSE IN CONTRACTORS and DEVELOPERS
Why build when prices and interest rates are so high? Why not go for our 33 suites with only $80,000 cash required and interest rate on the balance of 10½%. This building has a vacancy rate that is minimal and has a new furnace and is partly furnished. Good views and close to shopping and convenient bus — ample parking and well equipped. Full price $519,000, less than $16,000 per apt., (compare that with the accelerating building costs today).
ALSO:
and for a little larger investment you can add this 4 plex to go with the above making a complex of 37 apts. on 4 lots. And this last only requires $20,000 cash and $75,000 mortgaging at 10½% — full price $95,000 (scarcely more than a duplex), owner anxious to retire only reason for selling. And the four-plex will have a new 20 year roof.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Barrett calls for fall sitting

NDP leader Dave Barrett and Coquitlam-Moody NDP MLA Stu Leggatt demanded Monday that Premier Bill Bennett call a fall sitting to deal with the issues facing the province.

Barrett, noting that Bennett held a press conference last week to deal with the pension cut of former Socred cabinet minister Ralph Loffmark, said the premier's priorities must be questioned.

"We need a session," Barrett said.

He and Leggatt said it is scandalous the legislature has sat for only 40 days this year.

"The public does not have a government accountable to the legislature," Leggatt said, adding many of the problems the government faces would not have happened if the session had been on.

He cited the example of the negative public reaction to the cabinet overruling the Land Commission in agreeing to clip some 626 acres in Langley out of the land reserve.

"The land would never have been lifted if the ministers had to face the opposition daily in question period," he said.

Leggatt said there is only a margin of four between the number of Socred and NDP MLAs, "but the government feels it can operate by ignoring that political reality and by (cabinet) order in council."

Two sessions — one in the spring and one in the fall — each of two or three months would be more satisfactory, he said.

However Social Credit whip George Mussallem says 40 days is more than adequate for the government to carry out its business.

"It could have been done in less time," he said.

The MLAs' main job is to be in the constituency, he said.

"In 40 days we give the cabinet their instructions, and they carry it out, nothing more," Mussallem claimed.

"The NDP want more sessions because they don't want to be bothered going out to their constituencies. They love it in Victoria."

Pick the right fruit trees

When purchasing fruit trees and bushes always find out whether a second variety is needed for the cross pollination that is so essential to the production of good crops of fruit.

It is a point rarely thought about by the home gardener, and only experienced fruit men have the complete information.

Bulletins are availabe from the B.C. Ministry of Agriculture on fruit tree pollination, and these are often helpful.

Pears are probably the most difficult fruits because of the different varieties flowering over different periods. It is necessary to have a pollinating variety which overlaps and produces pollen that is compatible.

Some apples get along without help but pollinating varieties are needed close by for those which have difficulty in producing a good crop with their own pollen.

Peaches do not need pollinizers but certain black currants must have them. The Crusader black currant, for instance, requires the variety Consort.

Many gardeners are lucky in having a pollinating variety in an adjoining garden, although they may not realize this until the neighboring tree, for one reason or another, is cut down.

When this happens it often pays to have a professional tree man graft a scion of the pollinator to the tree already in the garden. This takes care of the job and is less fuss than trying to locate flowering branches of the required variety and have them in a bucket in the branches of the tree.

Here are a few tips on selecting and placing fruit and ornamental trees in the home garden.

In the first place, select trees which, when full grown, will not be any larger than desired.

A fast growing large tree will shade a tremendous area during the course of a day, and because it is fast growing it will make an extensive root system in its search for sufficient nourishment.

These two conditions add up to the gardener having less and less space each year in which to grow other plants successfully.

It is better to overcome the desire for quick results and plant a dwarf, slower growing specimen, leaving the large trees for the man with an acreage.

The second consideration is the exact spot in the garden each tree should occupy. Careless placing can eventually result in spoiling a pleasant view, or it may be that planting a few feet one way or another would have screened an objectionable view.

Property lines are another consideration. If you plant close to dividing lines between lots you must be prepared for neighbors, at some future date, objecting to the portion of the tree that overhangs their lot, or the roots that invade their garden.

Similarly, overhang on the street line may incur the displeasure of local authorities.

It is worth remembering that many good friendships have been wrecked because a neighbor exerted his rights to trim off branches, cut off roots, or pick the fruit on his side of the fence.

A tree gives pleasure to its owner and to all who overlook the garden, providing it does not intrude. Give due consideration to its height and its spread before the planting hole is dug.

Zambia claims S. Africa invasion

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — President Kenneth Kaunda says 1,000 South African and Rhodesian troops have invaded Zambia in an effort to destroy the copper-rich country's economy.

No comment was immediately available from the government in South Africa. However, a Zimbabwe Rhodesian military spokesman called the charge "ridiculous."

Kaunda, who made the accusation late Monday during remarks to a visiting delegation from Iraq, did not say when or where the invasion took place.

But he said Zambia's forces "are containing the situation despite inadequate resources."

"There are 600 South African troops and 400 Rhodesian troops on Zambian soil as I speak to you," Kaunda told a member of the visiting delegation at the state house for dinner.

Zimbabwe Rhodesian forces regularly cross into Zambia, on the ground and through the air, in pursuit of guerrillas here.

Kaunda said the South African troops are occupying the Western Province, which borders the Caprivi Strip. He did not say where the Rhodesians were.

The Caprivi Strip is part of South-West Africa, or Namibia, which is being guarded against incursions by South African defence forces.

Zambia is one of the five frontline states supporting Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe in their guerrilla war against Zimbabwe Rhodesian Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa.

Meanwhile, in London, the latest British proposal at the peace talks is for Zimbabwe Rhodesia's existing white-led police to be the main law-and-order force in the country during new elections for an independence government.

The plan was introduced Monday by British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington, chairman of the peace talks, at a 30-minute session of the negotiations, which group Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa's bi-racial government and its Patriotic Front guerrilla foes.

The British blueprint provides for London to dispatch a governor to the territory to restore, nominally at least, British authority there for the first time since Rhodesia's unilateral declaration of independence on Nov. 11, 1965.

The commanders of the current armed forces would be responsible to the British official who would take charge of the civil police during a two-month transitional period leading to new elections and lawful independence. Observers from the Commonwealth would be present during the election.

U.K. exchange curbs lifted

LONDON (AP) — All remaining United Kingdom exchange controls, except those relating to Zimbabwe Rhodesia, will be scrapped effective at midnight tonight, Geoffrey Howe, chancellor of the exchequer, told Parliament today.

Howe said "portfolio investment will be wholly freed and the foreign currency securities need no longer be deposited with an authorized depositary." Britons will be able to hold foreign currency accounts in the U.K. or abroad, he said.

"There will from tomorrow be full freedom to buy, retain and use foreign currency for travel, gifts and loans to non-residents, buying property overseas and investment in all foreign securities," the chancellor said.

Howe also told Parliament gold bullion may be bought and sold freely by Britons. Until now, Britons could only hold gold coins.

Doctors strike across France

PARIS (UPI) — The majority of France's 115,000 doctors went on a day-long strike today to protest the government's decision to freeze their incomes and reduce subsidies to the deficit-ridden national health system.

Only emergency cases were handled by members of the national Medical Doctors Association and doctors working in hospitals.

Some doctors, however, kept their offices open only to explain their grievances to patients.

The strike was called to protest Prime Minister Raymond Barre's decision not to authorize doctors working for the national health service to increase their bills this fall and again next January.

The unusual strike also was designed to counter Barre's decision to reduce the widening deficit of the health system by ordering its controllers to carefully scrutinize prescriptions French doctors are making out for their clients to combat possible waste and abuse.

The costs of the national health system have been increasing by 20 percent over the past four years. This year, its deficit is expected to top $5 billion.

The doctors association said progress of modern medical research and treatment and the growing desire of the population to benefit from them make a steady rise in the cost of medical care inevitable.

Chimp teaches 'speaking'

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — A chimpanzee has taught her adopted son the American Sign Language, which her trainers say shows that apes — like humans — can teach language to offspring.

Washoe, the first chimp in the world to learn American Sign Language gestures for the deaf, is passing those signs on to her 17-month-old adopted chimp son, Loulis, said Dr. Roger Fouts, a University of Oklahoma psychology professor and director of Project Washoe.

The language transmission experiment, which began in late March, is "going much better than I expected," Fouts said.

Loulis began imitating Washoe's signs — the same signs commonly used by the deaf — eight days after adoption and now uses 10 signs almost every day, Fouts said.

The signs are for the words hug, drink, food, fruit, come, give me, hot, that and for the names of researchers Diana Davis and Dr. George Kimball.

Loulis uses the words and name signs in the correct context, Fouts said.

The scientists who have worked with Washoe said the female chimp knows what she it doing when she uses the sign language.

Begin likely to survive votes of non-confidence

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin faces a series of no-confidence votes in the Israeli parliament but is expected to survive them with the help of Moshe Dayan and despite an adverse Supreme Court ruling.

Dayan, who quit as foreign minister, told a news conference today shortly after his resignation became official: "I will vote for confidence in the government I served until an hour ago. I would like to see the present government serve to the end of its term" in 1981.

Begin's government also is expected to reject a call by the opposition Labor party for a new election.

The first non-confidence motion is scheduled today.

Dayan resigned Sunday because of his inability to modify the hard line the government is taking in the negotiations to arrange autonomy for the Palestinians of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

The Supreme Court dealt the government a second blow Monday by ruling it illegally seized private Arab land for a Jewish settlement in the West Bank. It ordered the dismantling within 30 days of the hilltop outpost of Elon Moreh, near the Arab town of Nablus.

Dayan predicted the government would try to find some legal avenue to keep Elon Moreh alive, but Cabinet Secretary Aryeh Naor said the government will comply with the decision.

The court upheld an appeal by 17 Arabs whose land was expropriated for Elon Moreh. It said Begin's government chose the site under pressure from right-wing settlers and rejected the administration's contention that it was needed for security reasons.

It was a clear warning to the government that the court will no longer automatically accept the claim of national security as a reason for seizing land for settlement.

Begin and many of his ministers believe the West Bank belongs to the Jewish people by biblical right. But since Elon Moreh was established in June the government has decided it will restrict settlement to state land and no longer take privately-owned Arab property.

This angered Gush Emunim, the Bloc of the Faithful, which leads the settlement movement, and its members said Monday they hope the government will adopt legislation permitting seizures of private land.

Parliament could enact legislation legalizing seizure of Arab lands, but there is no indication the government plans to introduce a bill. Interior Minister Yosef Burg, hard-line leader of the Israeli team negotiating Palestinian autonomy with the Egypt and the United States, said he will have to study the court's ruling to determine whether government action is needed.

Egypt's deputy foreign minister, Butros Ghali, told reporters in Cairo the ruling was "a positive step" and predicted it will encourage West Bank and Gaza Palestinians to end their boycott of the autonomy talks.

Train derails, engineer dies

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The locomotive and 14 cars of a train carrying 300 passengers were derailed near the city of Nassjo in southern Sweden early Monday, killing the engineer and injuring 46 other persons, officials said.

Railway traffic south of Nassjo was delayed for several hours as rescue workers cleared the tracks. It was not immediately known what caused the accident.

The train was travelling from Malmo to Stockholm when it was derailed.

N-plants to get go-ahead, under tight reins

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential commission, calling nuclear power dangerous, will urge a revamping of the way the United States government regulates the nuclear industry, commission sources say.

But the commission, wrapping up a six-month investigation of the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant in Pennsylvania, stopped short of calling for a halt in future construction or licensing of plants or interfering with the operation of existing reactors.

The report was completed Monday after three days of closed meetings. During the sessions, commission members remained deeply divided over whether to call for a moratorium on future plant licensing until their safety recommendations could be acted on.

The commission, whose 12 members were appointed in April by President Carter to investigate the March accident, will present its findings and recommendations to the White House Oct. 30.

The recommendations will only be advisory. But Carter has called the commission's task "one of the most important ever undertaken," and its suggestions are expected to influence the nuclear industry.

None of the commission members or more than 50 professional staff members would comment on the draft report. But several sources who asked not to be named said the commission's recommendations and findings will include:

—A reorganization of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, abandoning the current five-member regulatory commission and putting in its place a single administrator along the lines of, for instance, the Environmental Protection Agency. The presidential investigators, during seven public hearings and in private comments, have strongly criticized the regulatory body, saying the agency has trouble with internal communications and has not given safety a high enough priority.

—Require the federal government to renew nuclear-power-plant licences at regular intervals. A plant is currently licensed only once, although the certificate can be revoked.

—Require future power plants to be located in "low-population zones," which would mean reactors could not be placed close to major cities. Currently, there are power plants north of Chicago and New York City.

—That utility officials as well as both federal and state authorities were ill-prepared for a nuclear accident such as occurred at the plant near Harrisburg, Pa., and that emergency procedures needed to be improved significantly.

The presidential panel, headed by John Kemeny, president of Dartmouth College, calls nuclear power "dangerous" numerous times in the report, said the sources.

But it does not suggest nuclear power should be abandoned.

The investigators concluded, based on Stanford University study, that the over-all cost of the accident will be $1 billion to $1.68 billion if the plant opens again.

Meanwhile, in Amsterdam, the head of the Royal Dutch Petroleum Co. said the non-communist world needs to build about 500 nuclear power plants in the next 20 years to meet its energy needs.

It also requires 600 new coal mines, six new natural gas fields and increased oil production, Dirk de Bruyne told an international energy symposium.

He said this would be necessary even if one assumed a low economic growth rate and 20 per cent greater energy efficiency by the end of the century than at the time of the 1973 oil crisis.

Tornadoes kill two in U.S. deep south

Associated Press

Tornadoes swept through towns in Louisiana, Arkansas and Missouri on Monday, killing two women — one of them eight months pregnant — in mobile homes, and injuring more than a dozen people, including several children.

Jeannie Hicks, 20, of Lake Village, Ark., died when a small tornado dipped down over Lake Chicot and overturned her house trailer.

Chicot County authorities say Mrs. Hicks, who was pregnant, was tossed about 50 metres from the trailer.

Her husband, Tommy Hicks, 27, was in critical condition in hospital, after being thrown from the trailer and landing in a nearby bean field. The couple's daughter, Tanya, 1, was found safe in her crib inside the trailer.

In Missouri, Alma Helms, 77, died when a tornado overturned her rural Oronogo mobile home, officials said. Her two sons suffered minor injuries.

Five other persons were treated and released at a Joplin, Mo. hospital for injuries sustained when high winds blew over their mobile homes.

And eight persons were injured when tornadoes ripped through four southeastern Louisiana towns, damaging a school, trailer parks and other buildings.

In Sulphur, La., five boys and a girl from an elementary school and two adults from a trailer park were treated at hospital for cuts and bruises and released.

"The suction was so bad it almost whisked the kids out," said Joan Sale, a teacher at the school, where the twister smashed windows and tore away part of the roof.

A Red Cross shelter was set up for residents of an apartment complex where electrical power has not been restored.

Two houses and 11 trailers were destroyed between Holly Beach and Johnson's Bayou, in Louisiana, and nine other buildings received major damage, a Red Cross survey showed.

Tornadoes also were reported in Cameron and Holly Beach. Another was spotted over Lake Charles, La., but did not touch down.

Wife's lover told to pay

WARWICK, R.I. (AP) — A Superior Court jury has ordered a West Warwick man to pay $80,000 to a former friend for having an affair with the friend's wife.

"This is like something out of the Dark Ages," Joseph McGair, lawyer for defendant Sidney Robinson, said after the verdict Monday. "It's as if people have been in closets for the past 40 years."

The jury of four men and two women ordered Robinson to pay $75,000 in punitive damages and $5,000 in compensatory damages to Gerald Zarella, who had sought $1 million. The jury found Robinson had "criminal conversation" with Zarella's wife.

Six life sentences added for strangler

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quietly repeating, "Yes, I did," Kenneth Bianchi admitted taking the lives of five women in the Hillside Strangler slayings that terrorized Los Angeles and was sentenced to six life prison terms.

"I wish I had the power to run the sentences consecutively, but in this state they must be merged as a matter of law," Superior Court Judge William Keene told Bianchi as he imposed the terms Monday.

Bianchi's pleas were part of a bargain struck with authorities, allowing him to escape the death penalty for strangulations here and in Washington state in exchange for his testimony against his cousin, Angelo Buono.

Buono had been scheduled to be arraigned in connection with 10 of the slayings after Bianchi was sentenced Monday, but his lawyer won a two-week delay. Lawyer Ronald Bain later said he may ask to have the case removed from southern California, where the killings occurred between October, 1977, and February, 1978.

The killings were called the Hillside Strangler slayings because the victims were found dumped on slopes around Los Angeles and Glendale. All the victims were young women.

Non-smoker statistics rate cheap insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. insurance executive predicts that discounts for non-smokers will spread through the life insurance industry because of a study that showed smokers are a much riskier group to insure.

The study, by the State Mutual Life Assurance Co., which pioneered non-smokers' discounts in 1964, is the first time any company has made public death statistics about policy-holders who smoked.

"The differences between the mortality of smokers and non-smokers are too large to be ignored . . . in individual life insurance underwriting and pricing," concluded the report released Monday.

It suggested that non-smokers, who are a 2-to-1 majority of adults, be considered the norm and that smokers be placed in a "sub-standard" risk category.

Approximately 50 of the 1,800 U.S. life insurance firms offer non-smoker discounts, but none of the 10 firms with the most business does State Mutual ranks among the top 20.

State Mutual President W. Douglas Bell predicted the study "rapidly" will convince more firms to offer discounts, and ultimately will push the industry to change its standard life tables to put smokers in a risk category.

State Mutual compared deaths among 60,000 non-smoking and 45,000 smoking customers and found non-smokers died at rates about 50 per cent below industry expectations.

Police officers disciplined

Force used on street kids?

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Several Victoria policemen have been disciplined over allegations they used excessive force against the so-called street kids, the Times has learned.

Police Chief Jack Gregory, who retires at the end of the year, has acknowledged that certain policemen were questioned about the charges.

But he said they were without foundation and said reports current among street workers and others that the officers had been told to "clean up their act," in the words of one worker, are untrue.

However, the Times heard from several independent sources that the police officers in question were in fact warned about their tactics in dealing with the street kids.

The sources were quick to praise the police department for acting quickly on the problem, which they were also careful to point out was caused by only a few members of the force.

Community worker Shirley Wakeham said she later saw two of the officers on foot patrol beat after their squad car had been taken away.

The action took place shortly after a Sept. 5 meeting at the police station involving Deputy Chief Jim Smith, Const. John Smith of the community services section and three people who work with the street kids — Wakeham, Rev. Philip Ross who runs the Upper Room retreat on Johnson Street and Gib Forester of the Mustard Seed storefront rescue operation on Pandora.

One participant said three policemen were mentioned by name at the meeting, but he knew "of only one personally." He also said he heard that within 15 minutes of the meeting action was taken by senior police officers to deal with the complaints.

Forester praised the Victoria police. "I found the police were bending over backwards to help."

Wakeham also said "there are some great cops" and most officers were uncomfortable with the knowledge that a few have used excessive force against the street kids.

She said when the deputy chief told the Sept. 5 meeting that police were generally co-operative, "I exploded for 45 minutes" with numerous specific allegations against certain officers.

Phoney letters spread

The police investigation into phoney letters to newspapers spread province-wide Monday with the discovery of more fake letters.

Associate deputy attorney-general Neil McDiarmid called in the RCMP to co-ordinate investigations already underway by Victoria and Vancouver city police and the Nanaimo RCMP.

The action came on the heels of allegations of more phoney newspaper letters, this time in the Nelson-Creston riding of NDP MLA Lorne Nicolson.

Nicolson said Monday he believes as many as 20 letters bearing fake names were printed in the Nelson Daily News during last year's campaign for the May 10 election.

Nicolson said the letters all attacked him or his party.

He said a number of letters first appeared in the paper in March and April, 1976.

When four of the names were checked, it was discovered the writers did not exist.

The fresh discovery and the broader police investigation are the latest development in the series of events tied in with the Social Credit lettergate affair.

Socred researchers Jack Kelly and Ellen Mackay had advocated the party play dirty to win the last provincial election.

One way was was to send phoney letters to the editor, they suggested.

Nothing was said until their suggestions became public last month.

It was then discovered their comments had been taped and some 170 copies of the tape had been distributed throughout the province.

B.C. to appeal family act verdict

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government intends to appeal a British Columbia Supreme Court ruling that found three vital sections of the province's Family Relations Act to be unconstitutional.

Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon overturned clauses allowing provincial courts to determine child custody, possession of family residences after divorce and the power to keep one parent away from children under a custody order.

Of the act's major provisions, only the right of provincial courts to order maintenance payment was upheld.

A spokesman for the attorney-general's department in Victoria said the decision will be appealed. He said the government has been trying to expand provincial court jurisdiction as a matter of policy.

It was the second major blow to provincial legislation in two weeks. The court earlier overturned the Heroin Treatment Act which called for compulsory treatment of drug addicts.

The test case is expected to have far-reaching ramifications for many family litigants whose provincial court cases were awaiting the outcome of the Supreme Court ruling.

The Supreme Court case began with an application by lawyer D.S. Moir for an order prohibiting Provincial Court Judge H.D. Boyle from proceeding with a Family Relations Act case in which a wife had applied for sole occupancy of the matrimonial home, custody of an infant son, an order that the husband be prohibited from entering the dwelling, and an

Tripled oil price urged for self-sufficiency

Times News Services

CALGARY — Provincial energy ministers were told Monday that Canadians should be prepared to pay a $4 annual increase in the price of domestic crude oil between now and 1983 if Canada is to be self-sufficient in energy by the end of the next decade.

The Canadian Petroleum Association, in announcing the need for the increase, also called for domestic prices to triple by 1986.

The CPA conducts research and lobbies for Canada's largest oil companies, including huge multinationals such as Shell, Texaco and Exxon subsidiary Imperial Oil.

CPA president Fraser Allen told the ministers the association would favor the $4-per-barrel price hike being widely reported. He added that the CPA wants prices to rise even more steeply in future.

Allen suggested a domestic oil price of $45 by 1986 — more than triple the present level of $13.75 per barrel.

The CPA's brief to the energy ministers called for annual $4 increases until 1983, followed by $5 per barrel a year until 1986 to catch Canada up to world prices, now about $25 and rising.

An increase of a dollar a barrel at the wellhead results in an increase of about 3.5 cents per gallon at the pump for gasoline and heating oil.

After 1986, Canada should follow anticipated annual world price increases of 8 to 9 percent, the brief said.

Allen said the large increases are necessary to finance massive energy projects needed to increase the domestic oil supply.

"The money's got to come from somewhere and it's got to come in very large amounts."

Allen outlined a five-point plan for achieving energy self-sufficiency by 1990, a goal set by the federal government.

The plan includes:

— intensive exploration and development in conventional oil- and natural gas-producing regions;

— dramatic expansion of production in oil sands and heavy oil;

— intensified exploration in the Beaufort Sea and off the east coast and production of large amounts of oil from these areas;

— new methods of enhanced recovery to increase production from conventional oilfields;

— conservation of crude oil.

Allen said there is no single answer.

"All five avenues leading to increased crude production must be pursued with the same tough-minded sense of purpose."

Allen said stepped-up exports of surplus natural gas are the key to the plan's success. The added revenues would be used to finance the program. Gas prices would continue to be set at 85 per cent of the price for the energy equivalent in oil.

Market rally fizzles out

TORONTO (CP) — An attempted rally by both the New York and Toronto stock markets fizzled today after some banks and trust companies in the United States raised their interest rates.

The New York market was mixed in an erratic session as the bank prime lending rate climbed to a record 15 per cent.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than three points in early trading, showed a 0.26 gain at 809.39 by 2 p.m.

But losers held a 4-to-3 lead over gainers in the mid-afternoon tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said some early buying was encouraged by the market's showing Monday, when the Dow Jones industrial average rebounded after slipping briefly below the 800 level for the first time since last December.

At Toronto, the TSE 300 index, the main indicator of price levels, was up 1.51 to 1,538.76 at noon although it had gained 11.28 to 1,548.53 at 11 a.m.

Analysts said the market opened strongly as bargain-hunters reacted to sharp losses Monday.

But the markets lost ground following announcements that several U.S. banks and trust companies had raised their prime lending rates.

The Royal Bank of Canada also announced an increase today in the U.S. base lending rate to 15¼ per cent from 14¾ per cent, effective immediately. The rate is the one at which the bank lends U.S. funds in Canada.

Monday, British Columbia Resources Investment Corp. shares dropped 65 cents on the Vancouver Stock Exchange to $6.25, about the same price at which trading started back in August.

There were 447,460 shares traded Monday. Analysts say the cause for the heavy trading and declining price is high interest rates.

Piglet protest for princess

SAN FRANCISCO (Reuter) — Twenty-five riot policemen, wearing crash helmets and carrying long batons, barred the way to demonstrators chanting "British out of Ireland" when Princess Margaret attended a $500-a-ticket dinner Monday night.

The 100 demonstrators, including a few children, had promised to release 1,000 pigs during the demonstration.

Instead, they produced just one frightened piglet, named Jigs, who was held on a leash and was decorated with a green ribbon.

This was the fourth demonstration in three days against Princess Margaret following a remark attributed to her in Chicago 10 days ago in which she was said to have described the Irish as pigs.

One time it was suggested she used the word jigs instead of pigs.

Princess Margaret's private secretary, Lord Napier, said the princess has denied making any such remarks.

Shah in U.S. hospital for cancer treatment

NEW YORK (UPI) — The exiled shah of Iran flew to New York today and was admitted to a local hospital for treatment of cancer, U.S. officials said.

In Washington, State Department officials said European and American doctors had examined the shah and reported the former ruler is suffering from a "malignant tumor," a form of cancer, and a blocked bile duct.

The two problems, the officials said, are unrelated to each other, but contributed to a significant deterioration of his condition in the last several days.

The Shah was installed in a three-room suite and surrounded by tight security, said the hospital's vice president for public affairs, Eamon Brennan.

William Greene, hospital administrator, said the shah was admitted about 11 p.m. Monday, an hour after he slipped into New York at LaGuardia Airport aboard a Gulfstream twin-engine jet.

The shah has been living in Cuernavaca, Mexico, since he was forced to leave Iran in February following a revolution.

U.S. state department spokesman David Passage said in Washington early today the shah was granted permission to visit the United States strictly for medical reasons.

Cartoon wasn't meant literally: lawyer

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A lawyer for the Victoria Times argued Monday that a political cartoon found to have libelled former human resources minister Bill Vander Zalm would be seen by the public as a gross exaggeration and not literally.

Donald Farquhar told the B.C. Court of Appeal a B.C. Supreme Court judge applied a literal interpretation to the cartoon.

Farquhar is representing the Times in its appeal against the decision last January of Mr. Justice F. Craig Munroe who ruled that the cartoon depicting Vander Zalm was libellous and awarded him $3,500 damages and court costs.

The appeal is being heard by a five-man court headed by Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz. The other judges are P.D. Seaton, E.E. Hinkson, W.A. Craig and J.S. Aikens.

A five-member appeal court is unusual. Appeals are normally heard by three judges and five judges are only called in when there is a constitutional question or when the court is being asked to reverse an earlier decision of its own.

When Farquhar completed his case, Nemetz told Rodney Taylor, counsel for Vander Zalm, that the appeal would resume this morning because of the unique circumstances of the case and possibly of law.

The appellants, in addition to the newspaper, are former publisher Stuart Underhill, editor Barbara McLintock and cartoonist Bob Bierman.

The cartoon, which appeared June 22, 1978, depicted a person picking the wings off flies. The person had a tag pinned on his lapel reading Minister of Human Resources. There was no caption.

Mr. Justice Munroe agreed with Vander Zalm's contention that the cartoon portrayed the then minister of human resources as a cruel and sadistic person. The newspaper said it was not defamatory, but if it was, then it was fair comment on a matter of public interest.

The case is almost without parallel in the Commonwealth. The only case cited at the trial involved a 1911 cartoon when the New Zealand Times was cleared of libel in a jury decision. A subsequent appeal was dismissed.

On appeal, one of the judges said politicians ought not to be sensitive even about defamatory matter. Public men must put up with laughing, ridicule and sneering.

But Taylor argued that the New Zealand Times case had not established a special category in law for political cartoons but simply on appeal it was held that the jury was justified in its decision that the cartoon, about a member of Parliament, was not libellous.

Farquhar argued Monday that Mr. Justice Munroe applied a subjective rather than objective test as to whether the cartoon was defamatory.

It was particularly important that the judge give consideration to the circumstances surrounding and prior to publication of the cartoon. Vander Zalm had established himself as a controversial politician and had been the subject of many critical cartoons and editorials.

The judge said the cartoon was not amusing but that was his personal view and not the determination of what an ordinary, reasonable person may have thought.

The judge did not give any or adequate, consideration to the fact it was a political cartoon.

Farquhar said it was only reasonable that those who did not share Vander Zalm's political views would have found it amusing and those who shared Vander Zalm's views would have their ire raised.

If a person found it amusing, that set the tone for how people would view it, as something not to be interpreted literally but as a message brought in a humorous way. Political cartoons, in particular, are not to be taken literally.

He said Munroe misdirected himself on the law by ruling that there were no facts before the readers because there had been editorials and cartoons before, and on the opposite page to the cartoon there was a critical column which included a flattering photograph of the minister.

The public had become used to cartoons involving gross exaggerations of Vander Zalm and when the public saw him depicted as pulling the wings off flies, the public would see that as a gross exaggeration and not meant literally.

Farquhar said anyone viewing the cartoon would automatically assume that it dealt with his actions as a minister and not his personal but his public conduct.

In effect, Munroe applied a literal interpretation to the cartoon. A reader would be more prepared to find allegory involved and not so quickly to apply a literal interpretation.

Farquhar also said Munroe applied the wrong legal test as to whether the cartoon was fair comment. He said the judge used the "ordinary person" test when he should have used the broader "fair man" or "honest man" test.

He said an English case held that fair comment must be given an extremely liberal interpretation and if the "ordinary person" test was allowed to stand, it would take the law back 200 years.

Farquhar also said the Court of Appeal can decide for itself, as in an appeal by way of a new trial, whether the cartoon reflects on Vander Zalm's personal character.

Boater pays for 'error'

A Vancouver boat owner was fined $150 after being found guilty by Judge Fred Green in Victoria provincial court Monday of impeding the B.C. Ferries' Queen of Alberni near Active Pass on May 19.

The ferry ran aground Aug. 9 on Collinson Reef, close to where the May 19 incident took place, and will be out of service until early 1980.

Manuel Leal, 49, was charged with impeding a larger vessel in a narrow channel under the Collision Regulations of the Canada Shipping Act.

Two RCMP officers testified they were conducting a small vessels check in the Active Pass area and, at about 10:40 a.m., they saw the ferry heading towards Swartz Bay and heard one long blast and two series of five blasts each on the whistle. The five-blast whistles were a danger signal.

They also said the vessel slowed down before Leal's 6.5-metre cabin cruiser moved slowly out of the way.

After the guilty verdict, Crown counsel Martha McNeely said the maximum penalty of $500 should be levied because it was a serious offence. She said the ferry was carrying a large number of passengers and vehicles and there was danger to life.

Green said he would not view it as that serious an offence but would consider that Leal committed an error in judgment. Events since May 19, the judge added, points out the problems which could arise.

$150,000 for park on spit

A $150,000 provincial lottery grant will be used to upgrade facilities at Sidney Spit, Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis said Monday.

The money will be used to build five kilometres of trails and a group campground accommodating 60 persons.

City hits again on back taxes

The city of Victoria is suing another property owner for payment of back taxes and plans to apply in court to have two other properties sold to have the taxes paid.

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers filed suit in B.C. Supreme Ccourt last week against businessman Jack Lacterman for $18,365.83 in taxes and penalties on property he owns at 762 Yates.

Two weeks ago the city took seven developers and property owners to court for payment of 1979 taxes totalling more than $300,000.

De Villiers also said he had obtained a judgment in court for the largest amount owing, $79,685.13 against Fort Victoria Properties Ltd., and will soon be applying for a court order to have its holdings — Market Square shopping centre downtown — sold to pay this amount.

Abacus Cities Ltd., the national property development company which went into receivership earlier this year, is also involved. It is the owner of Fort Victoria Properties, which is the firm Sam Bawlf set up in 1969 to carry out his renovation projects in the city. When he became an MLA in 1975 he sold to the Alberta-based conglomerate.

Abacus is also being sued separately by the city for payment of $67,886.85 in taxes on other property it owns in Victoria.

The other companies the city is suing are Concord Credit Ltd. for $50,883.75; Ponteix Properties Ltd. for $45,354.23; Victoria Park Place Ltd. for $27,273.21; Vista Homes Ltd. for $25,199.44 and Roanne Properties Ltd. for $25,221.69.

The Birdman: like his flock free at last

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Possibily the attraction was that they were free and he wasn't. But Frank Schlosser had a way with birds.

So much so that he became known as the Birdman of William Head federal prison.

It wasn't that Frank knew a lot about birds. He wasn't like another famous convict at Alcatraz.

But for six years, while serving a life sentence as a habitual criminal, he looked after a colony of swans and geese and ducks and other stray birds that frequented a small bay on William Head spit.

Each day the birds flocked around him as he fed them crusts of bread and other scraps he'd culled from the prison kitchen.

Three years ago his devotion to the birds gained publicity. An appeal was made for seeds, and the response was gratifying.

Frank, 69, the oldest inmate in the prison, held a special place in the eyes of staff and his fellow convicts.

Director Arlie Bender said Schlosser, whose record of thefts, false pretences and frauds stretched back more than 35 years, belonged to the old school of criminals.

"He was one of the last of the old-timers," Bender said.

"They gave crime a certain class. It was their trade, their occupation, and they were proud of it."

Like all old-timers, Frank accepted his punishment stoically.

He never created any trouble, any problems, except perhaps in the spring of 1978 when he went AWOL while on a temporary pass in Victoria.

With no one to care for them, the birds departed.

Schlosser was recaptured four months later. Two days before he was brought back to William Head the birds inexplicably returned and were waiting for him when he arrived.

This summer the parole board decided to transfer Schlosser to the minimum security correction centre on Pandora.

It was, in a sense, his ticket to freedom.

On Oct. 9 Frank's big day came.

He'd just settled in at Pandora when, the next day, he was stricken with a heart attack.

On Friday, Frank died in Victoria General Hospital.

A memorial service will be held Wednesday morning at Sands, 1803 Quadra.

In the afternoon, convicts and staff will gather in the prison chapel for a tribute to Frank, the friend of birds who longed to be free.

FINAL

Education study gets more time

By AB KENT

District 61 school trustees voted 6-2 Monday to extend the life of the Gillie commission on education for nine months at a cost of $32,000.

The move came after chairman Bernard Gillie, a retired education official, said his interim report tabled Monday is a "rather pallid document" and only a brief outline of with what he sees as the final report.

"I guarantee it will not be dull," Gillie told the board.

Cost of the commission so far has been $56,250. Members of the task group have received 110 submissions, including some 200 recommendations and expect to get more.

Gillie said what is wanted now from the board, administrative staff and schools is feedback.

His report lists 15 areas of major concern with junior secondary schools being singled out for the most questions and criticizm from parents, teachers and students.

That area is one of six to which the commission wants to devote special attention.

The others, not in order of priority, are personnel policies affecting teachers, special education, vocational education, kindergarten-primary programs and a survey to determine why students drop out.

Gillie said he still wants to interview 50-75 teachers.

Trustee Peter Yorke, saying he was not enthused about the commission from the start, said he is disappointed with the interim report: "It is worse than I expected."

The commission had broadened its scope far beyond his expectation, Yorke said.

But if it will produce the "goodies" as promised, Yorke said he feels $32,000 is a cheap price to pay for extending its term.

Mark Fisher said he is not convinced of the commission's effectiveness and if he were, he would rather spend $500,000 for results.

Spending $32,000 more is not going to make much difference, he said.

"Trustees have damn little impact on the momentum of the system over a short period."

Susan Brice said she is afraid the report will be just another dusty tome ignored on a library shelf.

School policy backed

Civic politicians were out in force as Greater Victoria school trustees Monday endorsed a policy for community schools.

Mayoralty candidates, aldermen and NDP MLA Charles Barber, many wearing James Bay lapel badges, were among about 40 spectators present at the board meeting.

Superintendent Allen Stables said a recent court decision recognizes funding and teacher appointments as being within the province of school boards and said he had no hesitation in recommending the policy.

The policy will see any new community school be given a one-year approval, after which evaluation will be carried out for successive three-year periods.

The decision will help developments at Spectrum School, trustee Martin Levin said, and may also achieve full community status for South Park School.

Levin said community interest in the alternative school system was evidenced by the presence of aldermen William Tindall, John Hayes, Robin Blencoe, Ron McKenzie, Murray Glazier and William McElroy.

The community school affords a wide range of educational, social, cultural, recreational and problem-solving opportunities in day and evening programs.

Sam and Rosina Voas celebrate anniversary in song

A sweet old song of love

Love's Old Sweet Song was never sweeter for Sam and Rosina Voas than on Monday at Matson Lodge.

Sam (Play It Again Sam) Voas tickled the ivories while his wife trilled a tune to mark their first wedding anniversary.

It was a double celebration for both. Voas was celebrating his 93rd birthday and their anniversary. She was celebrating her 100th birthday and anniversary. They were married on Oct. 21, 1978, by Brig. William Hosty, administrator of the Salvation Army facility.

Their courtship lasted two months. She had met Sam on her first visit to Matson Lodge, attracted to him as she entered andheard him playing.

It is the third marriage for both.

What is married life like after one year?

Voas smiled and his wife, pressing his hand, said, "Better; we know more about each other."

She chided him shyly as Voas said he was surprised at the suite which was given them after their marriage.

"There were two double beds instead of one single. There was lots of room to kick and roll around."

What did he give his wife on their anniversary?

He said it was a modern watch that could be taken apart and put together again. They'd taken the watch apart but hadn't managed the second part.

Shoot! It's the pits

Saanich Ald. Sandy Noel thought it was a bang-up idea but Ald. Irene Block didn't think it was much to crow about.

So council's bylaw enforcement committee Monday referred a crow shoot proposal to next year's budget committee.

If Noel's brainstorm had been adopted, the municipality would have sponsored a shoot similar to those once run by the provincial game department.

A shotgun shell would be awarded for each dead crow turned in.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said the crows — garbage collectors in black — are increasing while the songbird population is decreasing.

He said he'd like to have information from a reliable body on crow populations now and a decade ago.

A motion to ask the municipal staff to get the information and report back next month was passed.

Ald. Block wasn't impressed.

"I have lost cherries to robins," she said. "Are we going to shoot all of them as well?"

She said she doesn't see crows as villains and suggested "we lay this matter to rest in a big black coffin."

Saanich leery of emergency plan bylaw

The spectre of Hitler and haunting memories of a misused War Measures Act hovered over the gentle municipal chambers of Saanich Monday night as council deliberated the draft of an emergency program bylaw.

Ald. Howard Sturrock said the bylaw was reminiscent of the War Measures Act, and he reminded aldermen of how the Trudeau government's perception of "a state of apprehended insurrection" had been grossly inaccurate.

Sturrock said he could not support a bylaw "which gives such tremendous powers" until it is given much more study.

"We are considering an emergency," Mayor Mel Couvelier said. "It's unbelievable that elected people would back off from assuming responsibility in an emergency."

Sturrock said he wasn't opposed to such a bylaw and he isn't afraid of accepting responsibility.

"But I want to see a document with more complete details of what constitutes an emergency."

Ald. John Mika also shied away from a bylaw that could lead to an abuse of power. He said Hitler abused power, and he reminded council that there had been instances of misused power in B.C.

"Considering the mayor we have, we could have an abuse of power with such a document."

THe bylaw was tabled to the next meeting of council's protective services committee.

Under the bylaw, Emergency Measures co-ordinator Jack Bush explained, "the mayor is the supreme power. He can take any action he deems necessary, he's all powerful."

He said council initiative for the bylaw had been on the books since 1962, but could offer no reason why it had not been drafted sooner.

The bylaw gives municipal leaders, in the event of a national or civil emergency, the power to ensure that lives and property are protected, assistance that can be provided by the continuation of government.

An emergency, as defined by the draft bylaw, means an emergency proclaimed under the Emergency Program Act or a declaration made by the Saanich council.

Sidewalk sharing with cyclists eyed

Cyclists and pedestrians can share sidewalks as far as Saanich aldermen are concerned.

But Ald. Sandy Noel's eyewitness account of a cyclist being hit by a car on Shelbourne prompted aldermen to call for a report on the feasibility of cyclists and pedestrians sharing sidewalks.

This is the opposite to what happened in Victoria. Spurred by visitor complaints, Victoria aldermen had police crack down on cyclists and joggers using city sidewalks.

Noel suggested a pedestrian-cyclist mix on one side of the busier Saanich streets.

Ald. Geoff Vantreight said there should be a law requiring cyclists to use available bike paths. He said the Feltham Road path is scarcely used.

B.C. bid backed

B.C.'s bid to host a world-class exposition on transportation has received a boost in the way of moral support from the federal government.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis, the mover behind the project, said External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald has pledged full federal support when the B.C. Transpo '86 proposal comes before the International Bureau of Expositons in Paris next month.

"The next several months are critical as the IBE reviews our proposal in detail," Curtis said.

Curtis heads to Paris for the IBE meeting at the end of November.
